Chant Not Running In Next Election

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislative Reporter

At a news conference, on Bennett's return from a two-week business and vacation trip, the premier named Public Works Minister W. N. Chant as the most likely cabinet dropout.

This possibility was confirmed some time later when Chant announced he wouldn't seek the Social Credit nomination again in the Victoria riding he has represented ever since 1953. He has held the works portfolio for 17 years.

Chant, who will be 77 years old in July and whose wife died recently, said he was in good health but felt it was time to step down so that "other capable people can fill the gap."

The premier said of Chant: "He's rendered great service and I would be happy if he would run again."

But Chant later told the Colonist he felt it was better to step down while he still felt fit enough to enjoy life. He declined to discuss his future plans but said he would remain in his present post until after the next election.

"It will be a break in my life," the minister said. "But I believe it was Solomon in the Book of Proverbs who says 'The end of the matter is better than the beginning'."

Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan and Highways Minister Wesley Black, two of the three remaining original members of Bennett's 1952 cabinet apart from the premier himself, are also rumored to be thinking of retirement. Bennett said, however, he believes both will run again in the next election.

Earlier this week Kiernan was questioned on this topic

Welfare Waiters Bar Way

VANCOUVER (CP) — Traffic on a downtown street was blocked by angry welfare recipients Thursday when a strike by civic workers prevented them from receiving their cheques. (See also Page 23.)

About 150 demonstrators laid down or sat in the street outside the welfare office, blocking a transit bus and several cars.

The situation threatened to turn ugly when motorists attempted to drive through the crowd. A few cars were rocked by demonstrators but the drivers withdrew when it became obvious the crowd would not move.

The welfare recipients ended their protest after four hours, when they were told another welfare office was open and would remain open until all cheques had been distributed.

The protesters were taken to the open office by one of the transit buses they had blocked.

Few Election Hints In Turner's 'Budget'

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner may have opened a small gap Thursday in the curtain of secrecy surrounding the next federal election date.

He did it by telling the Commons he expects to bring a taxing-and-spending budget before the House Monday, May 8. He amplified that statement outside the House, saying:

"I don't expect there'll be an election before May 8."

The Turner statement was the closest thing to solid information opposition MPs have been able to pry from the Liberal front benches since speculation about an imminent election gripped the current Parliament about two months ago.

What Turner foresees and the decision of Prime Minister Trudeau, who is the only man who can decide when an election will be, could well be different. Turner was careful to say only that he "expects" to deliver his budget May 8. NDP Leader David Lewis said "it remains to be seen" whether this expectation will be realized.

Making his budget-date statement in a reply to Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West), Turner also apparently kept the door open on a budget presentation followed by a quick dissolution, perhaps before the six-day budget debate had run its full course.

Lambert asked a double-barrelled question — whether the government had given legislative priority both to bringing in a budget and holding reply covered only the first part of the question.

Tory Leader Won't Pledge $150 Pension

VANCOUVER (CP) — Opposition leader Robert Stanfield Thursday scuttled pensioners' hopes that a Conservative government would implement a $150 old age pension.

Such a pension, he told members of the Pensioners for Action Now group, would mean a total annual expenditure of $1.5 billion, twice the amount now spent.

"I'm anxious to go as far as possible," the Conservative leader said. "But I have to keep in mind that this (expenditure) would result in a very substantial increase in taxes."

And the increased taxes, he said, would add considerably to already widespread unemployment.

As an alternative, Stanfield promised a Tory government would provide a "substantial increase" in pensions, and would ensure that pensions keep pace with changes in the cost of living. He would not elaborate on what a "substantial increase" might be.

Saigon Repulses Quang Tri Flank

● How did those tanks get there? Page 3

Colonist - Los Angeles Times Service

SAIGON — A mixed force of South Vietnamese soldiers, marines, militia and cavalry troopers has repulsed a major communist effort to outflank the northernmost provincial capital of Quang Tri City, military headquarters reported today.

Though some fighting continued around the exposed capital just below the demilitarized zone, South Vietnamese headquarters was confident the tank-led enemy columns had been turned back. The South Vietnamese were issuing overlapping casualty reports indicating from 300 to 500 North Vietnamese killed and six to 10 tanks knocked out.

The battle in Quang Tri far overshadowed ground fighting elsewhere but it was a matter of degree. The communist offensive which began Good Friday entered its fifth week with critical threats being maintained against the highland provincial capital of Kon-

Peace Talks Probably Turn Secret

PARIS (AP) — The North Vietnamese said Thursday secret peace talks on the Vietnam war are probable. The statement was issued after both sides returned to the bargaining table for the first time in five weeks.

The session produced both charges and denials of a North Vietnamese invasion of the South, but both sides agreed to meet next Thursday.

Nguyen Minh Vy, North Vietnam's deputy chief delegate, said Politburo member Le Duc Tho will arrive from Hanoi within a week. He then added that secret talks are probable. Tho met privately in Paris last year with Henry Kissinger, President Nixon's national security adviser.

Brandt Saved By Two Votes

BONN (AP) — Chancellor Willy Brandt narrowly defeated an opposition attempt Thursday to oust him. The vote in parliament brought guarded sighs of relief to his supporters in East and West who had feared his policy of easing European tensions might fail.

But the crisis was not over. Opposition Christian Democrats mounted a fresh challenge to Brandt's coalition of Social Democrats and Free Democrats.

The opposition failed by two votes to unseat him through a no-confidence motion raised in the Bundestag, the lower house. The Christian Democrats won 247 votes but needed 249 of the 496 members.

Undaunted, they claimed the three abstentions meant Brandt did not have an absolute majority, and pushed quickly for a test vote on Brandt's budget.

Fighting back, the Free Democrats announced they

Floating Currency

Officers said the intruders dismantled the burglar alarm, cut telephone lines, entered the vault and cut a hole in the top of a small safe.

Then they carried water in buckets from the bank's basement and dumped it in the opening. Bundled currency floated to the top and were skimmed off, authorities said. Officials declined to say how much money was stolen.

Trudeau Backtracks

RCMP Again

OTTAWA (CP) — Removal of RCMP initials from buildings and patrol cars has been halted, said a statement issued Thursday night by the prime minister's office.

The statement said Prime Minister Trudeau had announced the decision at a meeting in Edson, Alta., "in response to many representations" sent to him and to Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer.

He referred to a public controversy centred in western Canada about a move — attributed to an RCMP decision in 1968 — to have the initials RCMP removed from patrol cars and buildings in favor of the word police atop the RCMP coat of arms.

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker was a leading opponent of the move, which peaked in parliamentary discussion some weeks ago.

The Trudeau statement released here said:

"The high stature enjoyed by the RCMP in Canada and throughout the world is a matter of pride to all Canadians. The government is determined not to permit any issue to detract from that prestige.

"The dislike of the new signs by Canadians — western Canadians in particular — has been communicated to us clearly. And we have listened."

B.C., Hydro Ignore Bus Bidder

VANCOUVER (CP) — A retired U.S. Air Force general said Wednesday he has offered the B.C. Hydro $1.1 million cash for its Lower Mainland transit system and claims he can make the debt-ridden operation pay.

Timothy James Manning, who has been in the transport business all his life, except for his military service, said his problem is that both Hydro and the provincial government appear to be ignoring his offer.

"They have barely even acknowledged it and they won't negotiate, which is most unusual," said the 63-year-old North Vancouver resident, who moved here from Seattle 14 years ago.

This is Mannings third offer to buy the ailing bus system. In 1958 he put in a $9 million bid for the bus system to the private B.C. Electric Co., forerunner of B.C. Hydro. It was rejected.

In 1962, after the government took over the power company, he made a second bid of $5.5 million. Again he was ignored.

Now he's down to $1.1 million and says he's still being rebuffed.

Manning said he has had solid financial backing for each of his offers, but does not want to name anyone.

He said people should not be taxed any longer to support an operation that is losing money.

The system costs about $17 million a year to operate and government figures put its annual losses at $2.3 million.

Earlier this month, the government offered the Greater Vancouver Regional District a base subsidy of $2.3 million, plus half of any operating deficit beyond that amount, to take over the system.

Manning did not give any details on how he would make the bus line pay.

He has been a transport consultant here since 1958 and has owned and sold two transport businesses in the U.S.

Gorde Hunter

Never Dull

SOME DAY, mercifully, we will no longer be afflicted with four little civic governments. The narrow parochial thinking of Victoria, Saanich, Esquimalt and Oak Bay will be forcibly replaced by one metropolitan body.

But in the meantime I must admit a certain affinity to the present system if for no other reason than the oft-times hilarious machinations of the elected body back of the Tweed Curtain. Oak Bay politics can't exactly be described as brilliant, but by the same rule of thumb, nobody will ever describe the goings-on as dull.

THE WINDSOR Park group — formed to stop either ugly or excessively large encroachment into the Windsor Park area—has been a rather worrisome thon in the side of certain members of that Oak Bay council. The group has been accused of being a pressure body, and it is hinted that certain members of the council now are afraid to make any move without first consulting with the group.

I am an open admirer of the group, but, as is always the case, there is another side to the conflict.

I give you the example of a letter written by Ald. Doug Watts to the editor of this journal.

"MR. HUNTER may be unaware that a petition, carrying over 200 signatures, which generally favors redevelopment, including even a controlled automobile service station, has been submitted to council. This clearly indicates public opinion in the area is divided and that a need exists to identify the wishes of the majority."

Watts goes on to list what he considers to be six benefits that would accrue to the public from the present Mace proposal for the area.

"Complete underground parking, sufficient for the entire project, including the retail area on Newport and the professional building fronting on Currie Road.

"A much smaller retail area than allowed under existing zoning, but adequate for local needs.

"A landscaped courtyard available for public use during normal business hours.

"Vehicle crossings over the sidewalks limited to one each on the Newport and Goodwin frontages, instead of multiple crossings on the Newport frontage to separate stores.

"Control of architectural appearances not possible under ordinary zoning."

Doug Watts concludes that it will be a matter for the public to decide and that his concern is to give the public that opportunity —possibly through a letter ballot.

I AM IN AGREEMENT with Watts' thinking, but I would point out that without the pressure exerted by the Windsor Park group, such an opportunity might never have presented itself. Without that pressure, it is entirely possible the project might have gone ahead without so much as a by-your-leave from the citizens of the area.

It is now obvious one group feels the Mace proposal is anethema, whereas another group is singing its praises. Good. Put it to a ballot andd stop the bickering. Let each side mount an appropriate defence of its view.

ANOTHER member of the write brigade heard from and dutifully noted. This one from a writer who wishes anonymityy. The complaint, a cartoon, under my signature, to do with the number of officers and non-commissioned officers in the Canadian armed forces as compared with the number of privates.

The writer, wife of a commissioned officer, feels I am anti-armed forces and in particular, anti-officer. She suggests the Colonist promote a be-kind-to Canadian Forces week and further suggests I should visit one of our destroyers to learn first hand that conditions are something less than a bacchanalian revel.

I AM NOT anti-commissioned, or non-commissioned officer. I am not anti-armed forces. Was one of those non-commissioned officers in His Majesty's Canadian Navy during the last large shoot-out and was unfortunately confined to dreary spells aboard both frigates and sweepers during that time. I have a sneaking suspicion the quality of living aboard those ship was somewhat less oppulent than the same quality aboard today's destroyers. I will admit, however, that nobody had the audacity to deprive us of our daily tot of pusser rum.

Main argument still seems to be there are considerably more chiefs than braves in today's armed services. Enjoyed your letter: Thought it hilarious.

Chant Not Running

and told reporters he wouldn't make his decision known until the Socred nominating convention is held in his riding of Chilliwack in the Fraser Valley.

Bennett said Thursday there is a "75 per cent chance" a provincial general election will be called this year. But he refused to answer reporters' questions — "don't fence me in" — claiming that it might not prove to be in the public interest to hold the election until 1973.

The premier, who looked fit and rested after a week-long cruise froc New York to the Virgin Islands, said he plans no cabinet changes before the next election. But after that, he added, there may be "some slight revisions" because "some" of his present ministers might not run again.

When reporters ran through the list of ministers, however, Bennett in each case except that of Chant said he was confident they would run.

The premier said his earlier comment on a Vancouver hotline radio show that Social Credit will be returned with 30 to 40 seats — the government now holds 36 of 55 seats in the Legislature — were strictly off the cuff.

It means, Bennett said, he believes not only in a strong provincial government but in a strong opposition as well.

His prediction for the opposition also made Thursday involves a wipe-out of the two-member Conservative group in the house, with the Liberals retaining their five-seat status, and the NDP picking up the balance of the house seats. The NDP now has 12 seats.

Recent surveys show Social Credit's position "looks good," Bennett said. The latest returns, he added, indicate that while leaders of pressure groups representing teachers and unions "want to fight us — the rank and file support us."

The public opinion polls, on which he declined to elaborate, the premier said, are one of three methods the government is using to determine when an election should be held and in the formulation of new policies for Social Credit's upcoming "third decade."

The other gauges are a cabinet tour scheduled for late May and early June, covering most of the Interior of the province, and the Ask Your Government series of radio advertisements placed by the provincial government.

On the tour, which has met with some criticism from local authorities who claim they are being pressured to sponsor luncheons and dinners for the cabinet, Bennett said the cabinet will be doing more listening than speech-making.

He shrugged off complaints that local taxpayers will have to pay for minister's meals and said no one has to put on a function unless they choose to.

"We're not going on the eating circuit," Bennett said, "and it won't hurt us to miss a meal. We can always take sandwiches. We're all just country boys at heart."

He stressed neither the tour nor the Ask Your Provincial Government ads were designed specifically for election purposes. The programs also provide the government, the premier added, with feedback necessary to formulate the proper policies for the next decade.

He said the radio advertisements, which have been heavily criticized as propaganda paid for out of the public purse, will consist of "genuine questions from genuine people" and not simply from Socred supporters.

Chant, born in Brampton, Ont., served as school trustee in Camrose, Alta., from 1927 to 1932, and as municipal councillor from 1932 to 1936.

In 1935 he was one of the Social Credit party which, under William Aberhart, swept into the Alberta provincial house, and Chant was at once appointed agriculture minister in Aberhart's first cabinet.

His appointment was relatively short-lived. On April 30, 1937, Aberhart asked Chant to resign within 24 hours, on the grounds there was "need of more aggressiveness and higher efficiency" in the department of agriculture.

Chant refused to resign, and was ousted by order-in-council on May 1, 1937.

The Chants came to Victoria in 1948 to retire, but in 1953 Chant was elected a Social Credit member of the British Columbia Legislature for Victoria — a year after Bennett's government took power.

On March 15, 1955, Chant was appointed public works minister in Bennett's cabinet and has served in that office ever since.

Canadians Taken 'For Ride'

ST. THOMAS, Ont. (CP) — Car buyers in Canada "are being taken for a ride" because the government lacks the courage to make American car companies charge the same for automobiles in Canada and the United States, Conservative front-bencher George Hees said Thursday.

Speaking at the Elgin Conservative nominating convention, Hees (Prince Edward-Hastings) said the government has not made American car companies live up to the 1965 automobile pact agreement.

Inward Eyelashes

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

By G. C. Thosteson, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My aunt has had three operations on her eyes because her eyelashes turn inward toward the eyeball. Now she has to keep the lashes taped down. When she tries to pull them out this causes the eyelid to bump up and is very painful. What could cause this?—R.L.

The condition is called entropion. In elderly folks it is often due to a decrease in the fatty and fibrous supporting tissues around the eye. This causes the eyeball to be in a slightly deeper position. The margin of the eyelid then rolls inward. (Scar tissue from a prior infection also can cause such trouble.)

I am surprised to hear that she continues to have the trouble after three operations. However, there are various types of operations used for this. She may need a different technique to keep the lid turned outward.

The taping offers only temporary relief, and pulling the lashes is not wise — there's the possibility of infection, and if there's one thing she doesn't need, it's an eye infection.

My advice is for her to consult an eye surgeon or a plastic surgeon, and get this condition corrected once and for all.

TOKYO (UPI) Japanese transportation workers called off a rail strike Thursday after getting a pay raise totalling more than $30 a month.

The ministry of transportation said the mass walkout, which lasted less than 24 hours, was the worst rail strike in Japan's history and affected more than 23 million passengers.

California Environmental Showdown

Industry Fights Hard

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — American industry is contributing generously to defeat the so-called "clean environment initiative" on the June 6 California ballot, a financial report filed with the U.S. secretary of state showed Thursday.

The statement, filed by Californians Against the Pollution Initiative, which is co-ordinating the campaign against Proposition 9 on the ballot, showed about 200 individuals and firms have contributed $841,957 thus far to defeat the environmental proposal. A final campaign contribution report is due about a week before the election.

The biggest contribution, $55,930, came from Bravo Oil Co. of Houston, Texas, a subsidiary of Southern Pacific Co. The next largest $50,000, came from Kaiser Industries of Oakland and three related Kaiser firms.

The ballot measure, among other things, would ban new offshore drilling, clamp restrictions on the composition of gasoline and declare a five-year moratorium on construction of nuclear power plants. It is sponsored by the People's Lobby of Los Angeles.

Three other major oil companies were among the top contributors to the anti-Proposition 9 campaign. They were Gulf, Texaco and Shell Oil companies, each of whom gave $25,000.

Other $25,000 contributors listed in the report were Southern California Edison Co., Pacific Gas and Electric Co., General Electric Co., Bechtel Corp., Westinghouse Electric Corp., FMC Corp., Los Angeles clearing house Association, Stauffer Chemical Co., E. I. Dupont de Nemours and Co., and Celanese Corp.

The report, filed by Whitaker and Baxter, a prominent San Francisco public relations firm, listed $531,711 in campaign spending by the committee.

Bridge Under Troubled Waters

This bridge is only one of those inundated by the Carrot River in Saskatchewan this week as swollen waters flooded farmlands and roads so severely the area 80 miles east of Prince Albert was called a disaster area. Heaviest in many people's memory, the floods had passed their peak Tuesday night and waters were receding.

Telesat Four On Road

In a press release Thursday, Telesat Canada announced that four of the stations are being taken by tractor trailers to the communities of Watson Lake, Yukon; Fort Nelson, B.C.; Pine Point and Fort Smith, N.W.T.

The four communities are part of 24 Canadian northern bases selected by the CBC to include live programming by Telesat satellite relays to the far North.

The first of the satellites, Anik, is scheduled for launching from Cape Kennedy, Fla., in early November.

How Did Tanks Get There?

BY JACK FOISIE
Colonist—Los Angeles Times Service

SAIGON — One of the shockers of the North Vietnamese offensive has been the enemy's lavish use of tanks.

It is guerrilla war no longer.

And one of the mysteries of the enemy drive is how the Hanoi generals managed to get so many of their 30-ton tracked steel monsters down the Ho Chi Minh Trail and cross-country into action against South Vietnamese defences.

"Since the NVA have no trucks, that we know of, capable of carrying a big tank piggyback, even assuming the roads were fit for such traffic, we think they must have come down under their own power," Col. J. Ross Franklin said. He is a senior American adviser to troops fighting on route 13 and around embattled An Loc, where numerous NVA tanks have been encountered.

"But to get tanks to An Loc, they'd have to be driven at least 200 miles!

"Yes," Col. Franklin agreed. "They probably wore out a set of tracks just getting to where the shooting begins."

His theory is shared by high ranking officers at U.S. headquarters here.

"It's another example of the enemy's dogged determination, without regard to logistical effort," one officer conceded. "I am not knocking our air force interdiction of the trail. The NVA probably lost lots of tanks on the way down, but just kept pushing replacements onto the roads leading to South Vietnam."

North Vietnamese tanks have also been sighted in Cambodian border provinces. Several days ago 10 were spotted just off the Saigon-Phnom Penh Highway, part of a force that has seized a large part of that road. Aircraft knocked out four of the tanks.

An Issue at Hand

NOT THAT THE GOVERNMENT can be held responsible for the unhappy situation of another shutdown in the construction industry, but it is quite conceivable that Premier Bennett has been waiting for the worst to happen.

This could mean that Labor Minister Chabot's efforts to avert the crisis, if this were possible, may have not been quite as earnest as they were made out to be. Perhaps this was why there was never any sign of confidence by him in his approaches to the contractors and the unions. He was dealing with tough customers, though. Neither side appeared to be willing to give and take from the start.

But now that the strike-lockout is at hand, it is not beyond the realm of possibility that Mr. Bennett will enter the scene for an open confrontation with labor, as some union leaders have predicted.

This could be the issue he has been seeking on which to go to the people. It might not come at once. Let the sore fester more and it could work to better advantage.

And work it would, without much doubt, even though those labor leaders who see the tie-up as a stepping-off point to a provincial election, don't appear to be worried.

The pain of such a work stoppage would intensify as time passes, but even before it is felt to any extent the general public would appear to be ready to side with any move Premier Bennett might make to force labor to back off its demands.

People have had enough of the wage spiral, inflation and unemployment which cannot all be blamed on the actions of unions. But the unreasonable demands of some are blackening the name of labor to the point where a recent Gallup Poll shows that public attitude toward the movement is growing more unfavorable.

The poll deals specifically with the strike weapon which, after all, is the basis of the union cause. It shows a steadily mounting belief that the right to strike in industries in which the public is inconvenienced should be forbidden.

The construction halt may be looked upon as a lockout but it comes as a result of strike threat and scattered action. And all strikes, or lockouts for that matter, cost the taxpayers in one way or another which, to say the least, is an inconvenience.

Premier Bennett could very well say "sorry" about this one and the majority of the electorate would welcome a tough stand he might take to show that he means what he says.

We Can Hardly Wait

CANADIANS ARE UNDERSTANDABLY agog with excitement at the prospect of soon seeing in print the selected sayings of Prime Minister Trudeau. Called "Conversations with Canadians" the book contains excerpts from Mr. Trudeau's speeches, interviews and question-and-answer sessions covering the period from February, 1968, to the present time.

Mr. Ivan Head, who edited the collection, described some of Mr. Trudeau's speeches that will appear as "so beautifully worded that they almost sound like poetry . . ."

Though it might be difficult for the majority of Canadians to match Mr. Head's enthusiasm for "Conversations" it is to be hoped that none will be so crass as to suggest that he is in any way biased simply because he is one of the prime minister's special assistants and speech writers.

Certainly it must be admitted that some of Mr. Trudeau's conversations with Canadians have been colorful and they may very well have deep poetic values. It cannot, for instance, be denied that many of his phrases such as (roughly interpreted) "Eat grit," "Fuddle duddle," "I'll come down and kick your pass," and "We've licked inflation," have a ring and swing about them that remove them from the realm of ordinary prose.

Not-So-Wretched April

THOSE OF US who have been complaining about cool breezes making gardening uncomfortable ought really to have been counting our blessings.

Not to gloat — although some eastern writers took pleasure in doing so around the end of January, when the west coast had a little snow and they had bare streets for a while — it is worth recording what The Ottawa Journal says about the "wretched" month of April.

By last Saturday, according to the Journal, the Ottawa white-collar farmer hadn't been able without high boots to get near his roses to check on their survival, and there was "not a chance of uncovering most of them yet." The red maples looked as they had in January or February. Daffodils, hyacinths and early tulips were well through the ground in sunny places and along heated house walls, but "showing little zest for growth . . ."

Now, let us complainers blush.

U.S.-Canadian Interdependence

By LUBOR J. ZINK

WHILE President Nixon's statement that the United States and Canada have "very separate identities . . . (and) significant differences" continues to echo strongly across the land, a sober realization that there isn't really much Canada can do entirely on her own, is sinking in.

The agreement dealing with pollution of the Great Lakes the president and Prime Minister Trudeau signed in Ottawa is a good illustration of the necessity of working together. Neither Canada nor the United States can tackle the enormous cleanup job alone. To serve their own interests they must deal jointly with this enormous task.

The imperative of interdependence which everybody can see in the anti-pollution program may not always be so obvious in other fields of intertwined or parallel Canadian-American interests, but it is there just the same. Refusal to work jointly in these areas in order to demonstrate "independence" would be just as foolish as refusal to cooperate in the cleanup of the shared lakes.

The paramount areas of intertwined or parallel national interests are trade and economic development, foreign policy, and defence.

Nixon's statement that "no self-respecting nation can or should accept the proposition that it should always be economically dependent upon another nation" was sweet music to the ears of Canada's economic nationalists. But no matter how they interpret it, they can't get away from the fact that Canada's material well-being depends to a large extent on trade. And since the bulk of Canada's exports is sold in the United States, there is no getting away from dependency on the American market without a sharp drop in the standard of living and a big increase in unemployment.

The economic nationalists maintain that the heavy reliance on the American market can be substantially reduced without severe ill effects by systematic diversification of trade. It's a fine theory but it doesn't work in practice for the simple reason that Canada's high-cost products are, with few exceptions, too expensive for all other major markets.

In the late 1950s the Diefenbaker government tried hard to increase exports to Britain and the Commonwealth. The attempt failed primarily because of the cost-price factor. Since then Canada's exports to the United States rose substantially and the trend continues despite the Trudeau government's endeavor to find new markets in the Communist-ruled countries.

Latest trade figures show that in the first quarter of this year Canada's exports to overseas markets dropped considerably and registered a slight increase over the same period in 1971 only thanks to higher sales in the U.S.

Shipments to the United Kingdom declined by 22 per cent, to Commonwealth countries by 20 per cent, to Japan by 14 per cent, to the European Economic Community by 10 per cent, and to Latin America by 6 per cent.

While the comparatively negligible sales (around $235 million) to the rest of the world remained virtually unchanged, sales to the United States have risen 17 per cent from $2.7 billion to $3.2 billion, accounting for close to 74 per cent of the quarterly total of $4.37 billion.

With this in mind, Nixon's stress on "Canada's right to chart its own economic course" loses much of the glitter the economic nationalists saw in it. Attention is now shifting to his qualifier of the do-as-you-wish dictum. The qualifier states that "the only basis for a sound and healthy relationship between our two proud people is to find a pattern of economic interaction which is beneficial to both countries."

In other words: It's up to you chaps to realize what's good for you and act accordingly in your own national interest.

The same applies to all major policy decisions. "Each nation," Nixon said, "must define the nature of its own interests; each nation must decide the requirements of its own security; each nation must determine the path of its own progress." But it is essential to hammer out "a policy which enables us to share international responsibilities in a spirit of international partnership."

Again it's the interdependence qualifier of the go-your-own-way-and-good-luck-to-you rhetoric that is emerging as the central theme of second thought assessments of the Nixon visit.

Short End of the Stick

By HENRY F. HEALD
Substituting for Richard Jackson on vacation
Colonist Ottawa Bureau

A major concern among Canadian politicians in relations with the United States is that this country will get the short end of the stick in any deal which affects both nations.

Despite the assurances by both U.S. President Nixon and Prime Minister Trudeau that the relationship between the two countries has come of age, there was little from the president's recent visit to dispel that major concern.

No matter how pleased Canadians may be to know they have reached the age of international maturity or how sincere the Americans are in their acceptance of Canada as a mature partner, it is still the lion sitting down with the lamb at the bargaining table.

There were two basic questions in the minds of reporters as they discussed the president's visit with government officials prior to Mr. Nixon's arrival. Would the government's evolving policy on foreign ownership be discussed by Mr. Nixon and Mr. Trudeau, and would they talk about the breakdown in trade negotiations in general and the auto-trade pact in particular?

The answer on foreign ownership was "no." Whenever the "soon" that Mr. Trudeau has been giving for five months now as the time for announcing the policy arrives, it will be obvious whether there was any American input.

Trade was discussed in general, but not in particular, officials said, although the two leaders did agree to instruct their negotiators to review the package with a view to getting the talks going again. Talks broke off in February when Canadian proposals were unsatisfactory to the United States.

There was some disparity in what White House press secretary Ron Zeigler told U.S. reporters about the talks and what the prime minister's aide told Canadian reporters four hours later. Mr. Zeigler said "they are willing to move" when discussing the question of trade irritants. Mr. Trudeau's aide questioned his use of the word "move." He conceded movement in terms of reactivating a stalled situation, but he said Canada's position after review could conceivably be the same or tougher than before.

If Canada can no longer depend on its small-nation, friendly-neighbor status as a bargaining ploy in seeking special treatment from the United States, it will have to adopt a much harder bargaining position than it has ever taken before. But no matter how willing the Canadians are to talk tough, they must always be aware of the ability of the powerful giant across the table to wreck the Canadian economy by restrictive trade policies.

The one official act of the visit — the signing of the Great Lakes water quality agreement — didn't do much to dispel the fear that Canada always gets the short end. The agreement falls far short of a hard and fast commitment by both countries to reverse the pollution of Lake Erie and Lake Ontario.

The commitment is hard and fast by Canada because the environment department has already reduced phosphate levels allowed in detergents and will reduce them some more next year, and Ontario and the federal government have agreed to spend $250 million on municipal sewage treatment projects.

From the U.S. standpoint the pact is an "executive agreement" which means it commits the Nixon administration to the clean-up but doesn't commit Congress to granting the funds. Nor does it commit any of the eight states adjoining the Great Lakes to co-operate with the federal government in the anti-pollution measures proposed.

The United States has already backed off from the phosphate reduction goals that were suggested by the International Joint Commission and refused to step up by two years its work on municipal sewage treatment planned for completion in 1976. One U.S. official admitted there is nothing in the agreement that the government hadn't planned to do anyway.

★ ★ ★

One only has to look at the massive industrial development from Detroit to Syracuse to realize what a powerful lobby it could mount in Washington. Mr. Nixon's intentions are not suspect, but selling those heavily industrialized cities on tough anti-pollution measures may be more than even he can manage.

Alternative Markets

The Oil From the North

By C. NORMAN SENIOR

ANNOUNCEMENT by Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau that the Mackenzie Valley oil and gas pipeline will be completed and in operation within the decade took many people by surprise. Most prior discussion of this project dealt with it as a competitor with the trans-Alaska pipeline and tanker route for marketing Prudhoe Bay oil. The Canadian prime minister spoke of a Mackenzie Valley transportation system as an undertaking standing on its own economic feet to provide transportation service between the Canadian Arctic and the settled portions of the continent.

The news spurs speculation about the future which may perhaps be put into better perspective by reviewing some of the known facts that may be relevant.

When Prudhoe Bay's magnitude was first appreciated, the market to which the oil companies looked was the populous industrialized Atlantic seaboard. Two trial voyages by MV Manhattan proved that a water route in that direction was not feasible. Canadian suggestions that a pipeline up the Mackenzie and across the plains to Minnesota might prove the alternative, were not cordially received in Washington, which wanted a route under all-American control. Canadians objected to the pollution hazard involved in tanker shipments from Valdez to Puget Sound and found some support in American quarters.

Meantime it became apparent that the oil companies who can be credited with a healthy understanding of their own interests made it plain they want the Alaska pipeline to ship from the all-year open port at Valdez. Despite Canadian and other protests it would be naive in this election year to imagine that the FPC or any other agency accountable to the president could veto the expenditure by the oil companies of hundreds of millions of dollars to divert that expenditure to another country. The Alaska pipeline will be built.

Credible reasons for this have been advanced, despite the fact that the Pacific Coast market served by the pipeline and tanker fleet is far too small to absorb the tremendous supplies flowing from Prudhoe Bay. Activities of U.S. congressmen from the Great Lakes region indicate that Puget Sound is not an efficient point from which to serve the midwestern and eastern industrial market on this continent.

One must realize also that Canada's National Energy Board is probably as well-informed as the American FPC about oil company plans and aspirations. The companies that have spent scores of millions exploring and developing in the Canadian Arctic are much the same as those involved in the Alaska project. Canada's decision to go ahead with the Mackenzie Valley system is not, therefore, conceived in a vacuum. There is every expectation that it will be a vital link in the oil marketing program.

Perhaps consideration of political events may shed light on what is afoot. The oil companies want the Alaska line, and Valdez outlet, they say, as insurance against interruption of mid-eastern supplies through unstable political conditions in that area. Alaska also provides a check rein against extortionate price demands by greedy Arab sheiks.

The question that arises is what markets are affected by these factors. One of the largest is Japan, whose fuel presently comes from the Middle East. Valdez is a lot closer than the Persian Gulf to Tokyo.

Somewhere in the midst of all this controversy an even more significant event occured. It was the demonstration that the world's potentially largest market, the 700 to 800 million Chinese, might slowly and cautiously be drawn into the realm of world commerce. Canada's diplomatic recognition and the Nixon-Chou En-lai meeting may well have given the oil companies an eyeful of visions of a market of a magnitude as yet immeasurable.

Tankers between Valdez and Puget Sound may yet be seen from the shores of the Strait of Juan de Fuca, but it might be a good guess that the fleet traversing the Pacific towards the Far Eastern market will make the movement to Puget Sound relatively insignificant.

Meantime the Mackenzie Valley route is being developed on schedule to serve the middle and eastern market of the North American economy.

New factors in the oil market have not altered the existing requirements. The Alaska oil may be destined for an area not thought of when discovery was first made, but the claims of the Great Lakes and Atlantic seaboard industrial regions are not being ignored.

The Banner of Student Protest

By WAYNE HOWELL

ERNIE Plumtree was almost booted out of university in 1938 for writing a radical editorial in the student newspaper. But Ernie graduated, married, and begat Ralph, Huey, Alvin, Elsie, and Archie — radicals all, in the great Plumtree tradition.

Ralph, the eldest son, treasures the moment back in 1964 when he led a disgruntled group of students to the office of the university president.

"The university is just an academic sausage grinder for turning individuals into the sort of servile technocrat demanded by business and industry!" cried Ralph in 1964. Ralph went on to his reward — with Proctor and Gamble. But protest beat strong in the Plumtree breast and in 1969 the second son, Huey, led a bearded, beaded group of students to the gates of General Motors' Oshawa plant.

"Down with your stinking corporate structure!" shouted Huey in the best Plumtree fashion. "Down with the rat-race. Down with meaningless toil. Up with human potential!" After a winter in a Manitoulin Island commune, Huey went on to his reward — with the Ford Motor Company.

The next brother, Alvin, took up the fallen banner of protest and led a march on Ottawa in the summer of 1971.

"Jobs! Qualified graduates demand jobs in business and industry! The educated have a right to sustenance!" was the cry that echoed across Parliament Hill in the summer of '71. Alvin went on to his reward — as an Opportunities for Youth director. It was about this time that the only daughter, Elsie, took up the cry. Elsie led a mob of grade 13 students to the shores of Lake Ontario and read to them from stone tablets.

"We won't go to college if we aren't assured cushy jobs in the corporate structure when we graduate!" cried Elsie.

Elsie went on to her reward when the family she was expecting to have came a little sooner than she expected and she is now happily married and living in a trailer park.

Old Ernie Plumtree had always had his doubts about Archie, the runt of the litter. But Archie did not let old Ernie down. In April of 1972, Archie was out in front of Queen's Park addressing an angry group of placard waving students.

"Down with tuition fee increases!" cried Archie.

Old Ernie would have dearly loved to have seen young Archie at the barricades but on Archie's big day the patriarch of this incredible brood was speaking at a Rotary Club luncheon.

"Our generation worked its way through college the hard way — living in tenements, shovelling coal, washing dishes, and waiting on tables. If those long-haired punks want a college education, let 'em work for it like we did!" cried Ernie.

The senator from Maine, who dropped out of active campaigning Thursday, blamed a growing shortage of money for his decision.

By his own staff's accounting, he had collected more than $2.25 million in campaign funds, but he had spent all of it and went several hundred thousand dollars into debt without making a noticeable dent in what proved to be stubborn public indifference.

Nor did it help Muskie much to have received the backing of an array of recognized political leaders.

Nineteen senators, 34 congressmen, nine governors and many of the Democratic party's senior figures gave him their blessing without being able to influence the vote significantly in their home states.

Other candidates appeared to overshadow Muskie on key issues. Gov. George Wallace of Alabama won anti-busing votes, Senator George McGovern captured the anti-war votes and both men capitalized on widespread voter disillusion with "establishment" policies and leaders.

Former vice-president Hubert Humphrey built an effective grass-rooots organization with the help of organized labor, older party officials and minorities while McGovern's campaign team was staffed by young people and suburbanites.

Muskie, on the other hand, relied on established state politicians who failed to rally support. In addition, his personal campaign staff was reported to have been frequently at odds over policies and strategies — and Muskie could not pull the organization together.

The crucial blow to his campaign — and one that is still not nearly explained — was the disappearance of his public support.

Muskie's early leadership in the Democratic race was not, as some commentators now hint, an invention of the media or of Muskie's staff.

It had been amply confirmed in public-opinion polls over a period of months and Muskie had won several "trial elections" over President Nixon conducted by polling organizations.

When the campaigning began in earnest, however, Muskie slipped.

What Use Is An Empty Field?

By TERENCE J. FLANAGAN

From Phillipsburg, N.J.

I live opposite an empty field. I like it because it gives me in a largely developed township the illusion of living in the country.

In West Jersey — I enjoy telling visitors from the east — we tolerate an empty field here and there; the unused spaces represent our distinct character, our ideological separation from the bricks-and-mortar mentality of urban dwellers.

Now I learn that they are planning to put a skyscraper on it. Very soon. And for good reason.

An empty field is nonproductive; it just lies there, fallow, with groundhogs and mice and tent caterpillars freeloading on the taxpayer.

Either some farmer should scratch it twice a year for a crop of lima beans or corn, or it should be developed. Idle land, like idle people, cannot be tolerated.

Strange word, "develop." The dictionary explains it: "To expand or realize the potentialities of; bring gradually to a fuller, greater or better state."

In practice it means filling holes.

If there is an empty corner lot, stick a gas station on it; if it's a large lot, a bowling alley or a fried chicken outlet.

If it's too small for a telephone kiosk, stick a billboard on it with some useful information about chocolate candy.

We seem to look upon our communities with the same bluenosed suspicion that the Puritans looked on their women. Cover anything that shows, regardless of esthetics.

Nature is an embarrassment to our way of life; it is languid, profitless. Green spaces serve no useful purpose in townships.

If you want to see nature, go to the parks to view it, as you would go to a drive-in theatre.

In serving the philosophy of what's good for business is good for all, we have in recent years revolutionized the concept of community life that has existed since antiquity.

Town squares and parks with benches, fountains and sidewalks encourage human contact, idle conversation and wasted time that could be spent more productively in stores. And so our town centres are being replaced by peripheral shopping centres.

In the new culture, strollers are rare. We salute neighbors by pressing a horn as we pass in our metal boxes between the television and the shopping mall. The car radio keeps us company on that lonely journey.

Saturday afternoon in the mall is big time. One would suspect from the crowds that the stores opened only once a month.

Citizens who a generation ago would have been ambling round the park are now funnelled into the aisles of department stores, meeting shyly as they trundle baskets of plastic brushes, musical yo-yos and miracle cement toward the checkout.

Youngsters who might have been wasting their time losing sneakers in an empty field are there by the hundred, unwitting rooters for the Gross National Product.

The empty field. It is not especially beautiful; it does not move the soul like some views. But it does have a silent, humble look about it, enough to reward the spirit that progress can be mocked a little.

Now the six-storey skyscraper in the land of single-storey dwellings. It will cut off my view of the hills, and the Tom Sawyers and Huck Finns of the neighborhood will have to pile into mother's wagon to sew their not-so-wild oats under regimental supervision.

The skyscraper may not be such a terrible thing in itself. What is terrible is the idea that all beauty must be sacrificed to profit. It is a myopic vision that sees only the opportunity, and not Keat's everlasting value that "beauty is truth, truth beauty."

Asked what he thought about Venice after returning from a visit to Europe, Gen. U. S. Grant is reported to have said that it would be a fine place if it was drained.

Mood of U.S. Electors Against Status Quo

This article appeared in The New York Times Tuesday—the same day Senator George McGovern won a landslide victory in the Massachusetts Democratic primary election and made a strong showing in the Pennsylvania primary. He currently leads in delegate strength for the Democratic convention.

By GEORGE McGOVERN

Prior to the first primary election in New Hampshire, and the most recent one in Wisconsin, the conventional view of men who write and read each other's syndicated columns was that the presidential candidate elected in 1972 would be the one who clings most tightly to the centre

This view — heavily supported by pollsters and analysts of the public mind — held that the American people wanted not a hard-fought battle over the great issues but a quiet coronation of the status quo.

Indeed, most Americans see the establishement centre as an empty, decaying void that commands neither their confidence nor their love.

It is the establishment centre that has led us into the stupidest and cruellest war in all history.

That war is a moral and political disaster — a terrible cancer eating away the soul of the nation. Yet those who charted its course brand its opponents as too far out to be electable.

My answer to that is "Nuts!" My platform is to stop the bombing of the people of Southeast Asia immediately and then get every American out of Indochina lock, stock and barrel within 90 days.

McGovern

The establishment centre has persisted in seeing the planet as engaged in a gigantic struggle to the death between the free world and the communist world.

The facts are that much of the so-called free world is not free but a collection of self-seeking military dictators financed by hard-pressed American workers.

Even so, the establishment centre has constructed a vast military colossus based on the paycheques of the American worker.

That military monster, now capable of blowing up the entire world a hundred times over, is devouring two out of three of our tax dollars. It inflates our economy, picks our pockets and starves other areas of our national life.

It was not the American worker who designed the Vietnam war or our military machine. It was the establishment wise men, the academicians of the centre.

My policy would be to cut the vast waste from our bloated military budget and invest the savings in job-creating enterprises based on a guaranteed job for every man and woman who wants to work.

The Number One economic issue before America today is: jobs and more jobs. This nation desperately needs the labor and talent of every man and woman in this land. Nothing is more wasteful than unemployment.

I pledge without qualification that if I become president I will do whatever is necessary to see that there is a job for every American who wants a job.

It is the establishment centre that has erected an unjust tax burden on the backs of American workers, while 40 per cent of the corporations paid no federal income taxes at all last year. I say that is an outrage.

I prppose to close $28 billion in tax loopholes for the rich and the powerful and use the savings to reduce property taxes, strengthen our schools and rebuild our cities.

It is the establishment centre that tells us we can afford an ABM but we can't afford good health care for he American people. i say that's intolerable.

It is he establishment centre that says we can afford a $250-million guaranteed loan to Lockheed but we can't afford decent retirement income for our senior citizens. And I say that's intolerable.

It is the establisment centre that says it's okay to tell the American people one thing in public, while plotting a different course in secret.

I say it's time to end the credibility gap and begin telling the American people the truth. The people of this country are not left or right or centrist. Rather, they seek a way out of the wilderness.

What is needed is a revitalization of the American centre based on the enduring ideals of the Republic.

The present centre has drifted so far from our founding ideals that it bears little resemblance to the dependable values of the Declaration of Independence and the constitution.

I want America to come home from the alien world of power politics, militarism, deception, racism and special privilege to the blunt truth that "all men are created equal — that they are endowed by their creator with certain inalienable rights and among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

I want this nation we all love to turn away from cursing and hatred and war to the blessings of hope and brotherhood and love.

Let us choose life, that we and our children may live. Then our children will love America, not simply because it is theirs but because of the great and good land all of us together have made it.

Favored Muskie Became Everyone's Second Choice

By PETER BUCKLEY, from Washington

Edmund Muskie's campaign for the presidency proved to be rich in financial backing and political endorsements but poor in issues, organization and, most important of all, votes.

The senator from Maine, who dropped out of active campaigning Thursday, blamed a growing shortage of money for his decision.

By his own staff's accounting, he had collected more than $2.25 million in campaign funds, but he had spent all of it and went several hundred thousand dollars into debt without making a noticeable dent in what proved to be stubborn public indifference.

Nor did it help Muskie much to have received the backing of an array of recognized political leaders.

Nineteen senators, 34 congressmen, nine governors and many of the Democratic party's senior figures gave him their blessing without being able to influence the vote significantly in their home states.

Other candidates appeared to overshadow Muskie on key issues. Gov. George Wallace of Alabama won anti-busing votes, Senator George McGovern captured the anti-war votes and both men capitalized on widespread voter disillusion with "establishment" policies and leaders.

Former vice-president Hubert Humphrey built an effective grass-rooots organization with the help of organized labor, older party officials and minorities while McGovern's campaign team was staffed by young people and suburbanites.

Muskie, on the other hand, relied on established state politicians who failed to rally support. In addition, his personal campaign staff was reported to have been frequently at odds over policies and strategies — and Muskie could not pull the organization together.

The crucial blow to his campaign — and one that is still not nearly explained — was the disappearance of his public support.

Muskie's early leadership in the Democratic race was not, as some commentators now hint, an invention of the media or of Muskie's staff.

It had been amply confirmed in public-opinion polls over a period of months and Muskie had won several "trial elections" over President Nixon conducted by polling organizations.

When the campaigning began in earnest, however, Muskie slipped.

His apparent loss of stature after an emotional attack on a New Hampshire newspaper publisher is often blamed for setting the process in motion.

Of more significance was probably his basic decision to spread himself across all of the primaries in a punishing schedule, while his opponents selected their best prospects and shared the task of knocking Muskie's lead apart.

The Muskie strategy had been to wrap up the nomination early. The date he had in mind was April 25, by which time his staff believed the opposition would be routed. Instead, by the deadline, Muskie had only proved that he was nearly every Democrat's second choice.

If delegates at the party convention cannot agree on a candidate, the second-choice figure could become generally attractive. In the meantime, Muskie has moved to the sidelines to nurse his wounds and try to restore his stature.

Kardelj Favored To Succeed Tito

By ALAN DEAN, from Belgrade

The question of Yugoslavia's future when Josip Broz Tito is no longer at the helm is again being raised as the communist leader nears his 80th birthday.

Despite official Yugoslav assertions that no one person could or would emerge as a successor to Tito, the current odds are that Edward Kardelp, a Communist Party theoretician who has been close to Tito for more than three decades, could well fit the role.

It is 18 months since Tito, who will be 80 on May 25, dropped the bombshell about his plan to retire from active politics.

To spare Yugoslavia a succession crisis, Tito proposed then formation of a body consisting of representatives of the six constituent republics and two autonomous provinces as well as the country's main social and political institutions. But many Yugoslavs feel that such a collective presidency would prove unwieldy and unable to keep the country on its non-aligned path.

Liberals here fear that the Soviets will stir up traditional centrifugal forces in the highly volatile country and then intervene, either directly or indirectly, to establish "order." The recent Croatian flare-up — which has still to be resolved — may well have been a rehearsal for such a scenario, they add. Moscow hopes that such methods would avoid extensive violence or the threat of Western counteraction.

It would also reassert the Soviet Union's wilted position in the Balkans.

Were Yugoslavia to disintegrate, the Russains could again dominate the entire area north of Greece and east of the Stettin-Trieste line which it originally carved out as its domain in the wake of the Second World War. Moscow's strategic thinking is that Romania, if enclosed by Soviet fiefdoms, would not longer be in a position to follow its increasingly independent path and that the Warsaw Pact could easily march into tiny Albania.

There is strong support for Kardelj in Yugoslavia's hierarchy, mainly because he is recognizable as a national figure who is not limited by regional interests. Two years ago, on the eve of his 60th birthday, he was acclaimed as the "second citizen" of the country.

A former partisan commander, the Slovenian-born Kardelj was one of the founding fathers of Yugoslavia's workers' self-management system — which is periodically attacked by the Russians.

In prewar days he lectured at Moscow University and has retained a fundamental grasp of the Soviet way of thinking — an attribute of great importance to anyone emerging as potential head of heretical communist Yugoslavia.

Astronauts in Fine Fettle

ABOARD USS TICONDEROGA (AP) — Apollo 16's astronauts splashed safely into the South Pacific Thursday after a 1.2-million-mile trip to the mountains of the moon. The Apollo commander reported:

"The condition of the crew is outstanding."

The men, John Young, Charles Duke and Thomas Mattingly, returned to Earth with 235 pounds of rocks collected from lunar highlands formed billions of years before man walked the earth.

"You really got your money's worth on this one," Young told the people of his country.

Splashdown came precisely on time at 2:44 p.m. within a mile of this carrier.

The spacecraft landed upside down, as is common with Apollo landings, with the sharp point of the cone-shaped craft under water, The astronauts inflated three balloons which righted the craft in the slightly choppy water.

So close was the landing to this recovery ship that sailors on its decks and television viewers could plainly see the parachutes deploy.

Thirty-nine minutes after Casper slipped into the water, the astronauts were on board the ship, brought there by helicopter.

Rock-Throwers Killed by Police

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Police fired on a mob of rock-hurling workers near Bombay, killing seven persons and wounding six others, the Press Trust of India reported. Ten police constables were injured in the incident, which occurred in a steel workshop at Abarnath, 20 miles north of Bombay.

Vulture Stolen

WOODFORD, England (UPI) — Michael Johnson, 18, appeared in court here on charges of stealing an African vulture from a pet shop. Exhibit A was the vulture.

Union: Socred Foe

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian director of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters says the union will be fighting with all its resources against the government of Premier Bennett in British Columbia's next election.

Senator Edward Lawson, who sits as an independent in the Senate, told a two-day conference of the Teamsters' Canadian section that the union probably will back sitting New Democratic Party members and oppose all other Social Credit members who seek re-election.

He told the conference, which ended Wednesday, that teamster participation in politics will be left to union organizations in each province, adding that the union definitely will move against governments it considers hostile to organized labor.

The action in B.C. was spurred by organized labor's opposition to the proposed Bill 88, which would have placed sharp restrictions on unions in that province.

The bill has since been shelved, but is still held over the heads of unions. All the sitting NDP members opposed Bill 88.

The conference, attended by Frank Fitzsimmons, international president, also discussed ways of expanding the present Canadian membership of about 65,000.

Fitzsimmons, the successor to James Hoffa, said in an interview the Canadian section has as much autonomy as any international union in Canada — perhaps more.

Student, 16, Charged

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — A 16-year-old male high school student was charged Thursday, following an incident Tuesday in which seven persons were treated after drinking coffee believed "laced" with the hallucinatory drug LSD.

The student, charged with "administering a noxious substance," will appear in Juvenile Court May 9.

A spokesman for the B.C. Medical Association said Thursday that it has had inquiries from 17 of the 3,300 practising physicians in the province. There was no indication how many of the 17 are actually doing balance billing.

The BCMA has advised doctors that it will supply the forms which have to be signed by the patient to make the procedure legal. This strategy is not to encourage balance billing but instead is meant to simplify the procedure for individual doctors, who otherwise might have to consult their own laywers as to the wording of the form.

Balance billing is a process by which the doctor collects from the patient the portion of a fee not covered by medicare or any other prepaid medical insurance plan.

PROVINCIAL COURT

A 23-year-old man who took from both his brother-in-law in Edmonton and a Victoria home where he was a guest will be sentenced May 11 in Victoria Provincial Court for theft and forgery.

The man, Larry Erwin Blake, pleaded guilty Thursday to two Victoria charges containing two counts of theft involving more than $50 and three counts of forgery. He was remanded by Judge William Ostler to May 11 for sentence after a pre-sentence report.

Testimony by two Victoria policemen disclosed Blake took a credit card from his brother-in-law in Edmonton before arriving in Victoria last weekend.

Last Monday, while a guest in a home at 314 Catherine, Blake took a wallet and its contents from one resident and an $800 motorcycle belonging to another. The wallet contained $85 cash plus cheques for $198 and $25.50.

On Monday and Tuesday, Blake used the credit card to obtain goods worth $32.44 from two stores and also cashed the $198 cheque — and damaged the motorcycle by driving it through a fence on Irma in Saanich.

He abandoned it there but went back Tuesday to get it. He took it to a repair shop and later was apprehended. At the time of his arrest, Blake has $75.45 on him.

Charles Norman Henry Height, 30, no fixed address, was sentenced by Ostler to a total of three months in jail after pleading guilty April 13 to two Saanich charges containing three counts of indecent acts and one of theft involving less than $50.

A Saanich policeman told court two of the indecent-act counts involved exposure by Height before teenage girls in the Douglas Street underpass while the third incident occurred near Mount View high school. The theft count concerned gasoline taken from a parked car.

A suspended sentence and a six-month probationary term were set by Ostler for Michael John Sullivan, 17, of 305 Dennison, who pleaded guilty to an Oak Bay charge of theft involving less than $50 — the theft of a wheelbarrow wheel March 4 from a neighbor's yard for use in a minibike Sullivan was building. Ostler instructed the youth to apologize to the neighbor and restore the wheelbarrow within a week.

□

School Merger Approved

Consolidation of the three elementary schools in the James Bay area at one site near Macdonald Park now has been approved in principle by the James Bay Community Association.

Association spokesman Mrs. Cindy Arden, of 423 Luxton, said Wednesday night that the decision had been taken at a general meeting of the group earlier this week.

The approval reverses a position against the consolidation taken by association president Sam Bawlf on behalf of the group at a public meeting April 14.

Mrs. Arden said the group had decided it wanted the schools to be consolidated because this would provide better facilities for the children.

But it also wanted the school board to keep the two small schools which would be phased out — Beacon Hill and South Park — for educational and community purposes.

It also wanted the expanded James Bay elementary to become a community school for general public use and hoped the board will consult with it in planning the expansion.

Bawlf, who was out of town and not available for comment Wednesday, met with trustees to discuss the issue before the community association meeting.

Trustee Peter Bunn said that at the meeting, which he described as "very worthwhile," the board attempted to show the association the "basic economic sense" of the consolidation program.

Medicare Billing

Patients' Go-ahead Ignored

Only a handful of British Columbia's doctors have shown interest in balance billing, a procedure by which they collect directly from the patient reimbursements not covered by medicare.

A spokesman for the B.C. Medical Association said Thursday that it has had inquiries from 17 of the 3,300 practising physicians in the province. There was no indication how many of the 17 are actually doing balance billing.

"But the idea is not exactly wildfire," added the spokesman.

The BCMA has advised doctors that it will supply the forms which have to be signed by the patient to make the procedure legal. This strategy is not to encourage balance billing but instead is meant to simplify the procedure for individual doctors, who otherwise might have to consult their own laywers as to the wording of the form.

Balance billing is a process by which the doctor collects from the patient the portion of a fee not covered by medicare or any other prepaid medical insurance plan.

Dr. Donald Shorting of Victoria has been presenting the necessary forms to his patients for nearly a month and he says none have refused to sign it.

He plans to actually start balance billing on June 1 if the fee dispute between the BCMA and the provincial government is not settled by then. The parties have not been able to reach agreement on a new schedule and the Medical Services Commission is still paying doctors the rates they were getting Dec. 31.

Shorting
. . . none refused

"I make an effort to speak with each of the patients individually and explain why I am asking their approval to bill them the extra amount," he said. "So far, none has refused to sign the form."

He said balance billing would bring greater responsibility to both doctors and patients — the doctor because he would cease charging frivolous sums to medicare and patients because they would have to think twice about obtaining medical care they will have to pay directly for.

Toronto Resumes Downward Trend

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market resumed its downward trend as prices in all major sectors closed with fractional losses in light trading Thursday.

The decline cancelled the fractional gains scored in slow trading Wednesday.

Despite the slump late in the session advances and declines were about even. Trading was light.

Analysts said the market was experiencing profit-taking and investor hesitation, influenced by the fact President Nixon's Vietnam address Wednesday night lacked the surprises necessary to motivate buying.

In the news background, the commerce department reported that the country's trade deficit surged to record levels in the first quarter of 1972.

□

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prices were down in active trading on the Vancouver Stock Exchange Thursday. In the industrials, International Visual closed up .20 at $2.85 on a turnover of 21,400. In the oils, Peace River Pete was unchanged at .17 on a volume of 227,500. In the mines, Granite Mountain closed down .02 at .55 with a volume of 215,000.

□

MONTREAL (CP) — Papers and industrials advanced as utilities, banks and the composite declined in moderate trading on the Montreal stock market Thursday.

Trade Future Endangered?

BRUSSELS (UPI) — The United States and the European Common Market opened trade consultations Thursday against a backdrop of growing U.S. protectionism and increasing European economic unity.

Diplomats on both sides warned that the two factors — protectionism and unity — could feed on each other and endanger the future of U.S.-European trade.

The two days of talks are part of a framework of twice-yearly consultations set up two years ago to let both sides exchange opinions and news.

They are not negotiations as such, but have proved useful in preparing negotiations.

Diplomats said the U.S. team planned to warn the Europeans that protectionist spirit—fueled by the devaluation of the dollar, the recession and growing competition abroad — was increasing in the United States.

This spirit could imperil congressional approval of any new U.S.-European trade agreements, they said.

The Common Market recently took its first steps toward monetary unity and an eventual single European currency, which would be a formidable competitor to the dollar. Also, it had begun discussions on a unified industrial policy.

Beer Price War Thirst Quencher

WALLACEBURG, Ont. (CP) — A price war has proven a boon to beer drinkers in this town.

George Hornbostel started it Monday by dropping the price of an eight-ounce glass of draught beer to 15 cents from 25 in order to attract customers to his Wallaceburg Inn.

By Wednesday, Edith Roberts found her Seaburg Motor Hotel customers had gone over to the competition, so she dropped the price to 10 cents. The Kent Hotel followed suit.

"It worked," said Mrs. Roberts. "The place is jammed."

Small Investors Face Commission Boosts

VANCOUVER (CP) — New commission rates have been proposed by the Vancouver Stock Exchange to reflect changing stock trading patterns.

Michael J. Ryan, chairman of a three-man commitee which studied rates along with members of the Toronto, Montreal and Canadian Stock Exchanges, said Thursday the new rates would be in effect in a month or so if they are approved. They will be voted on next month.

Ryan said institutional investors such as life insurance companies and pension funds have been trading heavily in the stock market and paying higher commission rates in percentage terms than those paid by smaller investors.

The proposed new rates would have the effect of making smaller transactions more expensive and larger transactions less costly.

The net effect would be to give the large investors a cheaper rate. In some cases there could be reductions as high as 50 per cent. Smaller investors could face increases of up to 30 per cent.

Ryan said his committee is recommending that members of the Vancouver exchange vote to accept the proposed rate changes.

TORONTO (CP) — President Thomas J. Bell told the annual meeting of Abitibi Paper Co. Ltd. that he is less pessimistic now about the future of the newsprint industry than he was a year ago.

"In assessing the future at this time last year, I found it easy to be pessimistic and most difficult to be optimistic," he told shareholders.

"While I do not look for early and easy solutions to the industry's problems, some signs of recovery are beginning to appear."

□

VANCOUVER (CP) — Shareholders of Bralorne Can-Fer Resources Ltd., voted at their annual meeting to change the company name to Bralorne Resources Ltd.

They also voted to enlarge the objects and powers of the company so that it can "engage in any kind of commercial, industrial, mercantile or service enterprise." Until now the emphasis has been on mining, oil and gas.

President F. William Fitzpatrick told the meeting that in this year's first quarter the company had sales of $5,696,000, cash flow of $911,000 or 19 cents a share and net earnings of $390,000 or 8 cents a share.

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal city council approved a $473.5 million budget, and one councillor warned the city is headed for financial disaster.

Councillor Paul-Emile Robert said the 1972-73 budget made him "truly disturbed about the financial future of the city."

Two other councillors joined Robert in criticism of a 6.8-per-cent increase in real estate tax, expected to bring in an additional $7 million annually.

Telephone Monopoly Hit

OTTAWA (CP) — A newly-formed association wants to break the "monopoly position of the telephone companies" over a portion of the telecommunications business.

Klaus Wilk of Ottawa, president of K. W. Wilk Associates Ltd., told a news conference Wednesday that the group wants new legislation or new policy permitting anyone to connect proper equipment to the telephone network.

He announced formation of the Interconnect Telecommunications Association of Canada which he said has 25 members.

Wilk, president of the association, refused to name members.

He said that the market for interconnection with the telephone network is $80 million to $100 million annually.

This would include switchboards, home telephones, computer terminals and other terminal equipment.

Wilk said the Bell Canada Act gives Bell Canada the power to set "reasonable requirements" for connecting non-Bell equipment to the telephone network.

He said that "in the protection of the monopoly position of the telephone companies these requirements have seldom been reasonable."

Wilk said he is not familiar with legislation outside Bell territory but telephone companies in other parts of Canada take the same position as Bell on interconnection.

Wilk said the association wants to avoid a confrontation with Bell and other telephone companies. It did not believe that court battles were the best way to achieve their goals.

Perception Industries Ltd. of Toronto won an interim mandatory order from the Supreme Court of Ontario last November requiring Bell to reconnect lines and services disconnected from Perception's offices in October when the electronic firm installed its own internal telephone system.

It is understood to be the first test of Bell's assertion of a legal monopoly over the installation and operation of telephone equipment on private premises.

Association members include companies who design, install, maintain or supply telecommunications equipment. Wilk said the association has members from coast to coast.

Budget: Few Election Hints

budget — since the 1968 electlysts.

It predicted freer spending by finance department anation, tabled in the House Tuesday an economic review by the population for such big-outlay items as housing, cars, furniture and appliances and companion government policies to encourage this by making borrowing easy.

Such spending could stimulate productive activity and create new jobs.

But the review steered away from absolute predictions of a drop in unemployment levels, something forecast a year earlier that failed to develop.

The review also said conditions could be ripe for another bout of price inflation, noted that investment by industry for new plant is unlikely to be strong and added that Canadians would spend more on imported products than they would earn by selling abroad.

Given this background, what kind of action is Turner likely to take in a May budget?

Tinkering with the income tax levels seems unlikely with the mammoth tax-change bill barely in effect for the first.

There could be changes designed to firm up what the review saw as soft spots — more attractive depreciation writeoffs for new industrial plants, for example.

A review conducted under Revenue Minister Herb Gray has been in the government's hands for months. Trudeau keeps saying its findings will be released soon and government policy will be announced simultaneously.

Another factor in the puzzle is the natural government desire to include some attractive goodies in a budget that could be followed soon by an election.

The country's last full budget was brought down June 18, 1971, by E. J. Benson, Turner's predecessor in finance and now defence minister. It included an end to a special 3-per-cent tax on personal income introduced in 1968 as a one-year anti-inflation measure but extended through two other tax years. The tax was scrapped as of July 1, 1971.

That budget also eliminated a 12-per-cent sales tax on margarine and a similar 15-per-cent tax on television sets, radios and hi-fi's.

Sales taxes were withdrawn for any anti-pollution equipment installed in a plant's production system.

Brandt

were replacing two of their lawmakers who voted against Brandt in hopes of guaranteeing him a majority.

The fate of Brandt's nonaggression treaties with Moscow and Warsaw, up for ratification in parliament next week, hinged on the political manoeuvring.

The treaties, renouncing the use of force and recognizing Second World War German territorial losses, are central to the design for easing cold war tensions. Their approval would clear the way for the four-power Berlin agreement easing travel restrictions.

Collapse of Brandt's government would almost certainly ruin chances for early ratification of the treaties.

Brandt survived a bold power bid by Rainer Barzel, head of the Christian Democrats. But the result of Barzel's unprecedented no-confidence motion left unclear how many votes in parliament Brandt can safely claim.

Regardless of the outcome of the budget vote, Brandt's survival of the no-confidence challenge was a major personal victory.

West Germany's first Socialist chancellor, he was greeted by a standing ovation after the vote.

"What has been proved is that no majority exists besides the majority which elected me chancellor in the 1969 general election," he said.

Quang Tri

tum, the border city of An Loc, 60 miles north of Saigon, and a fresh and ominous series of attacks in Tay Ninh province northwest of Saigon.

In the current mood of South Vietnamese and American headquarters in Saigon, however, the past 24 hours was rated a relatively quiet day.

"We didn't lose anything," a spokesman reported.

Headquarters officers were openly apprehensive that a forth major front was developing west and northwest of Saigon — where more Russian-built tanks have been cropping up in intelligence reports.

Skirmishes in this area have been growing more intense and more frequent.

South Vietnamese headquarters reported two such battles Thursday — near the Michelin rubber plantation town of Dau Tieng and south of Tay Ninh City. Though south Vietnamese battle reports are not to be accepted literally, they listed almost 250 North Vietnamese regulars killed in these two actions — mostly from intensive air strikes.

Headquarters officers claimed the South Vietnamese forces engaged in the defence of Quang Tri City were fighting with minimal air support.

Heath Winning on Labor Front

LONDON (CP) — British law is slowly imposing itself on explosive unions with Prime Minister Heath emerging as the victor in a struggle that may sharply influence this country's turbulent industrial relations.

A hint that the unions are withdrawing from the brink of a national crisis, ready to accept the new reforms as facts of life, came as eight major union leaders met with Heath Wednesday night.

They are reported to have appealed for some independent form of mediation and conciliation service as a means of avoiding a legal battle before the newly-established national industrial relations court.

In two crucial test cases before the court, judgments were brought down against the unions. An earlier suggestion by the governing nine-million-member Trades Union Congress that the court and its law be ignored was abruptly revised as the TUC advised unions to obey the court's ruling.

No Second Money in This Tournament

Attitude on Littler's Side

By JIM MURRAY

RANCHO LA COSTA — Twenty-six out of 28 players who qualified teed it up in the Tournament of Champions down here last week. Gary Player had a prior commitment. So did Gene Littler.

Gene is in a tournament where he needs a two on the 18th hole. He's in a deep bunker and he has to hole the shot to make the cut. There's no second money in this tournament. First prize is life.

Golfers are used to hazards. You can take off your shoes and get out of lateral water. You can hit an inch behind the ball and par out of trap. You can play a cut shot out of the rough. But how do you play out of a melanin? What's the club for malignancy? Is there any way to birdie cancer?

Gene Littler has won 25 tournaments. That makes him one of the registered giants of the game. He won this tournament three times in a row. He has won the U.S. Open. Not many living men can say that.

They said his "attitude" was a big part of Gene's game. He won or lost with a shrug. He played for money, not for history. He never could abide much of the publicity humbug that went with being a star in our era. Gene just showed up for work like the plumber, carpenter, electrician or milkman. He was a mechanic. He never expected to be adored for doing a good job. He came from a long line of people who did good jobs.

They said he was "colorless." They called him Gene The Machine. He didn't have armies, navies, fleas, banditos. Littler's "fans" were Mrs. Littler.

Well, not quite. A number of us who watched Littler over the years, who waited for the hat to get too small, the ego to begin to show, came slowly to realize Gene was not a golfer, he was a man. A helluva man.

You never heard Gene cry, complain, throw a club, snarl at a marshal. He never showed up in purple plaid pants. Shucks, he was on the tour 17 years and he never even got sunburned. He looked without rancor, prejudice, and sometimes without even interest on the world.

He was a homebody who played until he won the rent money, then went home by Labor Day to do the important work — raise a family. I never heard him raise his voice or his fist. You never heard him say a malicious or unkind thing.

I don't know anything about his religion — Gene's not the type of guy to talk about that — but I always figured he was the type of Christian Christ had in mind when he founded Christianity. That'll embarrass Gene, but it's high time somebody embarrassed him.

He was kind of an asthmatic kid but he had the most gorgeous, compact swing that could ever happen to a player. They said it would last "forever."

Well, "forever" was age 41. "Forever" was the other day. Gene Littler cannot raise his left arm high enough to comb his hair, never mind hit a four-iron.

He went to a doctor for a routine checkup a few months ago. He felt fine. The doctor was moved, for some reason, to check under Gene's armpits. The lump the sawbones found bothered him. But not nearly so much as what he found in the lump.

The idea of a cancer operation would scare most men into a dead faint. But Gene has always played the hole as it came up. Poker-faced, phlegmatic, pragmatic, he's got his driver out again. He thinks he's on the fairway. He smiled as he confronted the golfing press down here the other day.

"I'll be playing again by the end of the year. I'll probably be just as bad as I ever was," he grinned.

I don't know as it matters that Bobby Mitchell won the tournament here. But I do want Gene Littler to get his 26th career win. This is one sudden-death playoff where I really care. If anyone has the temperament to make the other guy blow up in this kind of a match, it's Gene Littler. So I'm betting he'll win his fourth tournament of champions. He always was toughest in the tourneys where they let the rough grow.

Rangers Need Cup Win To Beat Back Memories

NEW YORK Rangers are looking ahead, but the past stays with them and only 1972 Stanley Cup victory will beat back the intruding memories.

They don't concern past playoff failures because the Rangers sort of shot down the libel about not being able to "win the big ones" when they successively disposed of Montreal Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks. What can't be ignored even in the face of those triumps is their record against Boston Bruins.

The clubs who open the best-of-seven 1972 final on Sunday have met in seven previous playoff series — the 1927 and 1928 semi-finals, the 1929 final, the 1939, 1940 and 1958 semi-finals and in the 1970 quarter-finals.

MUCH STRONGER

Nothing can be gathered that is important now from the first six series (Boston won four of them) but the Bruins proved handily the better club in 1970, winning by four games to two and outscoring their rivals, 25-16.

"But", says New York-coach Emile Francis, "this Ranger team is much stronger now than the one that lost in 1970. It has a lot of new faces.

NEW FACES

Since that 1970 series, the Rangers point out, they have added goalkeeper Gilles Villemure, defencemen Dale Rolfe, Gary Doak, and Jim Dorey and forwards Bobby Rousseau, Pete Stemkowski, Bruce MacGregor, Glen Sather and Gene Carr and veteran Phil Goyette joined their ranks just before the playoff start.

However, gone from the 1970 Rangers are defenceman Tim Horton, Al Hamilton and Arnie Brown and forwards Orland Kurtenbach, Jack Egers, Bob Nevin and Dave Balon.

TURNOVER HELPFUL

It is generally conceded that the talent turnover has been beneficial, but it remains to be seen whether the gain has been enough. It can also be argued that the Bruins have also improved in the past two seasons.

The National League's East Division champions haven't had as many changes as the Rangers but they have added proven quality in forward Mike Walton and defenceman Carol Vadnais, and Garnet Bailey is a rugged, capable youngster.

EXCHANGES A PLUS

The Bruins count the exchanges a plus and can point to the fact that Phil Esposito has blossomed into a sensational scorer in the past two seasons while linemate Wayne Cashman has developed into a standout two-way player.

It would be all academic at the moment but for the facts of the past season. The Rangers blew into Boston on Oct. 10 and ruined the Bruins' home opener, then fell flat on the promise of the impressive 4-1 victory.

EXTRA MOTIVATION

In five subsequent meetings, the Rangers only scored four goals while the Bruins, reportedly given an extra motivation by disparaging remarks made by New York defenceman Brad Park in his book "Play The Man," scored 24. It was 6-1, 4-1 and 2-0 in the three New York meetings and 8-1 and 4-1 in the last two Boston faceups.

Brimming with confidence after their two fine playoff conquests, Rangers dismiss those results almost airily.

"It's a new season now," claims MacGregor. "When you get into the playoffs, especially the final, what happened in the past doesn't mean that much any more."

"The way we've been playing I can't imagine any team defeating us," says captain Vic Hadfield.

There is more restraint in the camp of the Bruins, who give Rangers full respect.

Coach Tom Johnson, who volunteered that "only a great club" could eliminate Montreal and then take Chicago in four games, indicated his club wasn't overawed.

"I have to think we have something," he said, "so the way I look at it is that they will have to come to us. They will have to try us on for size and then see which way it goes."

There was perhaps a hint there that the final will be more physical than the two previous series involving the Rangers. However, the Rangers have now some muscle of their own. It promises to be a fine series. The Rangers are motivated by their desire to prove they do not flop when it's crucial while the Bruins, who probably would have preferred a revenge shot at Canadiens, are still smarting from the quarter-final upset a year ago. And they don't like Park.

Expos Blast Dodgers To Give Astros Lead

Montreal Expos broke loose for 16 hits Thursday night and made Houston Astros the leaders in the National League's Western Division.

Early leader of the Eastern Division, Canada's only major league baseball club ended a three-game losing streak by besting Los Angeles Dodgers, 7-5.

Dodgers entered the game tied with the Astros, who weren't scheduled for Thursday action in a program which listed no action in the American League.

Ron Hunt hit run-scoring singles in the fourth and sixth innings to pace the Expos to a 4-0 lead but it was a three-run seventh inning which won it when the Dodgers rallied in the late innings.

Singles by Bob Bailey, Ken Singleton, Tim Foli and Denny Lemaster, a wild pitch and a sacrific fly produced the deciding three runs.

Victory kept the Expos in second place, one game behind the hurrying New York Mets, who made it six wins in a row by slipping past the outlucked San Diego Padres, 4-3.

Beaten for the fourth time by one run, the Padres were done in by Jerry Grote, who hit a home run and a run-scoring single, and Rusty Staub, who hit his first homer of the season.

Meanwhile, things continued to be tough for last year's division winners. The San Francisco Giants were outslugged, 7-6, by Philadelphia Phillies and the series-winning Pittsburgh Pirates were nipped, 5-4, by Cincinnati Reds.

A barage of home runs won it for the Phillies. Don Money hit for the circuit twice and Deron Johnson and rookie Greg Luzinski, who broke a 4-4 tie in the ninth inning, did it once each.

In Pittsburgh, where the home team got off to a 3-0 lead, the Reds won when a single by Ted Uhlaender, his first in the National League, and a sacrifice fly by Dennis Menke produced two runs.

Shamrocks Lure Talented Youth

Victoria Shamrocks added more depth and size Thursday with the signing of coveted Mainland youngster.

Team-manager Norm Kowalyk announced that John Kastelein, a six-foot, two-inch 215-pounder who played last year with the junior New Westminster Salmonbellies had been given his clearance and agreed to terms.

Kastelein, who has attended four workouts, is expected to arrive here on the weekend and should be in the lineup Wednesday when the Shamrocks open their home season in the Western Lacrosse Association.

Bucyk Leads Bruin Pack On Playoff Scoring List

Boston Bruins, who set a record for a four-game series in the semi-final triumph over St. Louis Blues, have the top four scorers in the Stanley Cup playdowns.

Veteran-leftwinger John Bucyk is on top with 17 points, one more than Phil Esposito and Bobby Orr and three more than John McKenzie.

Orr set a playoff record by getting 14 assists from the nine games the first two series required and has a minimum of four games in which to add to it. However, Bucyk and Esposito, who leads in goals with nine will both have to be at their most effective if they are to erase records for most points and most goals.

Bucyk needs to get 11 points against the New York Rangers to gain the record for most points for one playoff year, set by Esposito in 1970 and tied by Frank Mahovlich last year, while Esposito needs six goals in the final to erase the mark of 14 set by Mahovlich last; year.

A feature of the Boston performance to date has been the play of the Fred Stanfield-Bucyk-McKenzie line. It has accounted for 19 goals and 44 points to take over from Esposito's unit as the most-dangerous Boston line.

★ ★ ★

Bucyk, Boston	8	9	17
Esposito, Boston	9	7	16
Orr, Boston	1	15	16
McKenzie, Boston	5	9	14

Stanfield, Boston	6	7	13
Rousseau, New York	4	9	13
Hadfield, New York	6	6	12
Fairbairn, New York	5	5	10

The Rangers have so far been led in playoff scoring by Bobby Rousseau, who has performed brilliantly as the replacement for Jean Ratelle on the top New York line. The former Montreal star has four goals and 13 points one more than linemate Vic Hadfield, whose 12 points included six goals.

Bill Fairbairn is next on the Ranger list with 10 points, five of them goals. But while the New York leaders have played one more game than the Bruins, their point totals measure up in that the Rangers faced the tougher opposition, eliminating Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks.

Blues, United Clash Here For Soccer Final Berth

United and Blues clash at 2 p.m. Saturday in the last Coast League match at Royal Athletic Park this season.

Paul's Canadians won the other sudden-death semi-final last Sunday and, if United beats Blues, the first meeting in the two-game, total-goal final will be in Vancouver Sunday, May 7, with the second clash at Centennial Stadium on Saturday, May 13.

United cruised past the New Westminster squad, 3-1 and 5-2, in league matches.

But the Blues, coached by Sandy James, improved rapidly after a bad start and climbed from the basement into the playoffs.

Blues have won their last five games, including a 3-2 victory over Victoria Gorge Molsons in a clash to decide fourth place.

Much of this improvement has been due to the scoring feats of centre-forward, Ken Phillips, punter for the B.C. Lions of the Canadian Football League.

Tom Westwater, formerly of Victoria, and Peter Nolan have also done a lot toward getting the Blues into the playoffs.

If Irvine is fit, the starting lineup will be Barry Sadler in goal, Howie Anderson and Ray Telford in the fullback berths, Ranjit Dillon, Irvine and Brian Robinson as the half-back line and Dan Lomas, Ron Thompson, Tom Forrester, Pete Roberts and Jan Bentley as the forwards.

United's player awards for the season will be presented at half time.

Involvement Key To School Relays

Involvement is the key to what officials expect will be a highly successful fourth-annual All Schools Relays.

This year's meet opens at Esquimalt high school at 5 p.m. next Monday and continues Wednesday and Thursday evenings at Centennial Stadium.

And it has a new format. This time there will be no invitational events and instead more schools and more students will be involved.

More than 2000 athletes from some 60 schools, both public and private, are expected to take part in the three-day meet. Last year, about 1500 competed.

Main emphasis will be on relays with senior high, junior high and elementary schools all running 8x50 metres, 4x100, 4x200, 4x400 and 4x800 events.

Only other events on the track will be the 100 metres for all divisions, an 800-metre race for senior girls and a senior boys' mile.

As well there will be "cross-country" races, to be run around the outside of the tracks. The only field events will be high jump and shot put.

Mt. Douglas will be trying for its fourth straight senior high-school title. Last year, Mt. Doug easily won both boys' and girls' team titles. Oak Bay was second over all.

Lansdowne took honors in the junior high school division last season Gordon Head won the first two years.

Richmond will be trying for its third straight victory in the elementary school contest. Lake Hill won the elementary title first time out.

Padres Replace Gomez

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Preston Gomez was fired Thursday as manager of San Diego Padres and third-base coach Don Zimmer, 41, was named to succeed him. Gomez directed the National League baseball club since it was formed in August, 1968.

The announcement was made by E. J. Buzzie Bavasi, club president. Bavasi said the change was made after he and Gomez had met for a short time earlier in the day.

"I explained to Preston why I thought a change in managers was necessary at this time," Bavasi said.

The Padres are in fourth place in the Western Division with a 4-7 record but have lost five of their last six games.

Zimmer, in his 23rd season in professional baseball, rejoined the Padres' organization this year. In 1969 he managed San Diego's farm team in Key West, Fla., and in 1970 handled the club's Salt Lake City team in the Pacific Coast League.

Zimmer was third-base coach at Montreal last season.

Opinions Vary on Talent Dilution

But as all else has expanded, has quality diminished?

Thirteen years ago, in professional football, baseball, basketball and hockey, there were 42 major-league clubs and about 1050 players. By the end of 1972, if the new hockey league opens for business as planned, there will be 107 teams and about 2600 players.

So people will have more than twice as much sports . . . quantitively.

STRAPPE'S LAW

Qualitatively, we may run into a problem perhaps best defined by Strappe's Law (named for the legendary Jacques Strappe, who once organized a softball league for lefthanded Lithuanian pipefitters in Schenectady).

His law states:

"When the number of available roster positions in a given league exceeds the number of athletes qualified to fill those positions, there is likely to be a shortage of talent."

Some impartial observers will tell you the present quality of professional sports attests to the validity of Strappe's Law.

Even on the inside, you'll find some who speak candidly.

"I think," said Jerry West of Los Angeles Lakers, "that the quality of basketball has no doubt suffered somewhat . . . the strongest teams I saw in basketball were from about 1964 to 1968."

CAREERS PROLONGED

West said one effect of expansion has been to prolong playing careers. "I think there's a fallacy in most sports today," he said. "People say you need a wise old veteran for the stretch run, or to come in off the bench. I don't believe that."

"You mean a lot of these old guys are around just because of the scarcity of players?"

"Absolutely," Jerry said.

But West made a point of saying his sport has improved tremendously in another way.

"When I started in 1960," he said, "basketball was probably a minor-league sport masquerading as a major-league sport. Now, when it comes to salaries and accommodations and things like that, it's really a major-league operation."

What about expansion and football? Can the product be as good as in 1959 when the number of players has increased from about 450 to about 1050?

Some say football hasn't suffered artistically. One is ex-Los Angeles Ram Elroy Hirsch, now athletic director of the University of Wisconsin.

"I don't think expansion has decreased quality," he said. I think defensively everybody's much better today. A lot of it has to do with training methods and diet.

"Another thing: I think that when there were only 12 teams, a lot of guys who were good enough to play couldn't. There was no room for them."

Alex Karras, for years a defensive tackle with Detroit, disagrees. "There are no teams today really loaded with good personnel," he said. "When I came into the league in 1958, I believe we had a 36-man player limit and only 12 clubs. There were three or four teams in the league that had tremendous personnel.

CAN BOUNCE AROUND

"When you turned 28, you were considered an old man. You were over the hill. Now they're talking 34, 35. A guy can bounce around for years. I probably could have played 'til I was 40 if I wanted to.

"And the competition itself is less. The ballplayer today figures if he can't make one team he can make another. I think competitive spirit is lacking today. The player takes his time about putting out. As a result, he may not round into a real good player for three or four years."

Baseball has expanded the least of the pro sports. The number of major league teams has increased only 50 per cent (from 16 to 24) since 1960.

"I think there was a little thinning of talent immediately after the expansions," said Dodger vice-president Al Campanis. "But I think the game is as strong as ever. I think clubs are better than in the early '50s, which I think was about the best period of all time up to then.

"The kids are bagger, faster and they've been taught better. Teaching has changed in the last 10 years."

REASON FOR ARGUMENT

There may be room for argument about the impact of expansion on basketball, football and baseball. Hockey is another story.

The NHL is expanding from 14 teams to 18 and the new World Hockey Association plans 12 teams. So there could be 30 in two years where there were six.

The trouble is, nearly all professional hockey players are produced in Canada, whose population is barely greater than California's.

Bob Pulford, ex-Toronto star now with Los Angeles Kings, said the answer is for the United States to start pro-

"When we had six teams," he said, "there was no problem. But 30 hockey teams? This is where the States are going to have to develop players. Canada will produce more, but certainly not enough. Hockey must look to the colleges. If colleges here (in the United States) become a breeding ground, hockey's problem is over."

Overall, that's the story in pro sports. You start with people who will give anything to get into a league. So they give anything, and they get nothing. The nothing is then dressed in bright uniforms, given a heroic nickname and represented as a major league team.

Rugby Oldsters Form Committee

Wak-Waks started it all.

It was that announcement that the over-40 rugby players from Japan would pay a visit to B.C. in October.

Now, many who had hung up their boots some time ago have had a urge to get back into the game.

A group of Victoria Rugby Union oldsters have formed a committee which will organize games once a month until the Japanese visit. The officials also hope to continue through next rugby season.

Dave Mackenzie, a former Scottish international and one-time Olympic sprinter, is president of the group. Bob Hutchinson is secretary and M. P. B. Wrixon is in charge of publicity.

The over-40 (on Jan. 1) squad will be made up of former players living in Victoria and nearby areas, some still playing in the Victoria Union's second and third divisions. Several former internationals are expected to be in the side.

Clarke will give his "boys" their first run against Royal Roads Military College at the college at 2 p.m. Sunday.

That will be just the first step leading to the clash with the Wak-Waks at Royal Athletic Park, Oct. 4.

The Colonist Kingfisherman Salmon Contest opens Saturday morning for the eighteenth season. Top prize this year is a CP Air trip for two to Hong Kong, a hidden weight prize for any salmon five pounds or heavier and any bass or freshwater trout one pound or heavier caught by a Colonist subscriber.

The more serious anglers will be out to pick up Prince Buttons for the heaviest 25 fish each month in each of the three salmon categories and the 15 heaviest fish in each of the fresh water categories.

Oak Bay and Becher Bay waters are among the best bets to pick up chinook salmon buttons this opening weekend, but there are some other promising spots. Sansum Narrows and Chemainus waters are worth a try. Nanoose-Northwest Bay-French Creek waters have been producing the occasional large chinook and Campbell River has been producing good catches along the waterfront.

Saanich Inlet has been giving up a few chinooks at last, both in the Tod Inlet to Willis Point and McKenzie Bay waters and in Finlayson Arm.

Roy Smith picked up a 16.4-pounder and a 9.14-pounder on Sunday on Strip Teaser and flasher near Goldstream Island. Les Inglis boated a 20.4-pounder on Minnow Teaser in the same area and Vern Palliser clicked with a 14.12-pounder near Goldstream Island.

Blues are still being taken in Saanich Inlet on flies and are also spread out all the way from Nanaimo, where fishing has been good, through Nanoose, Clayton's, to French Creek and Qualicum off the claybanks.

But they get spread out a little thinner further north, and they have been far out . . . off the tip of Ballenas, and one mile from shore at Qualicum. They are also from Kelsey Bay to Rock Bay and just a mile from Deepwater Bay in up-Island waters.

* * *

Cowichan Lake is always the best early-season spot to catch a button-winning trout. The creek mouths are still the best spots but trollers have been taking them at the foot of the lake near the weir. For smaller fish, try Shawnigan, Dougan and some of the shallower lakes. Great Central and Sproat Lakes, of course, are worth while trying for those who want larger trout.

It is still a little cold in the Campbell River area but the shallower lakes that are not still snowed in are worth trying.

Steelhead are running late this year and there are still some to be caught in most rivers.

* * *

Topping the VSIAA 50-rung ladder derby is Roy Smith with an 18.8-pounder, followed by Elmer McKinney with a 17.10-pounder, Gary Vaughn with a 15.10-pounder.

* * *

RCN Angler's Association Annual Trout Derby will be held in Cowichan Lake May 6 from dawn until 2 p.m. Weigh-in will be at Bert Dodd's wharf, between Honeymoon Bay and Gordon's Bay, or for those travelling by car, off Walton road at Honeymoon Bay.

Crowds Down, Gate Up

SEATTLE (AP) — Fewer people spent more money to see Western Hockey League teams in action this season, Bill MacFarland, WHY president said Wednesday.

"The league took in more dollars than ever before despite Seattle's miserable showing," MacFarland said.

Seattle won only 12 of its 72 games and accounted for most of the league attendance drop with 97,000 fewer fans. Overall, league attendance was 1,032,233 — down 56,000 he said.

"Denver was up about 50 per cent," MacFarland said.

"Phoenix was up 35 per cent and San Diego up 14 per cent. San Diego had its biggest attendance in 1969-70, 302,000 paid, but this year the club drew more dollars even though their attendance was about the same as last year, while Salt Lake was down a little."

So what?

Most of the people who buy our Evinrude Starflite V-4's aren't racers. They just want the best engine they can buy, from whoever makes the best engines.

Setting the world's outboard speed record and holding it for 11 years has taught us a lot about how to build faster, stronger, more reliable production engines. That's why the big Evinrudes (the 85, 100 and the new 125) are all V-4's. The tougher, shorter V-4 crankshaft can take a lot more than conventional in-line crankshafts. And deliver a lot more, too. Evinrude's V-4 design also cuts down on engine height for greater stability when the going gets rough.

We think our 131 mph. record has helped give you a better outboard. And if our competition didn't think so, why are they still trying to beat it?

No Second Money in This Tournament

By JIM MURRAY

RANCHO LA COSTA — Twenty-six out of 28 players who qualified teed it up in the Tournament of Champions down here last week. Gary Player had a prior commitment. So did Gene Littler.

Gene is in a tournament where he needs a two on the 18th hole. He's in a deep bunker and he has to hole the shot to make the cut. There's no second money in this tournament. First prize is life.

Golfers are used to hazards. You can take off your shoes and get out of lateral water. You can hit an inch behind the ball and par out of trap. You can play a cut shot out of the rough. But how do you play out of a melanin? What's the club for malignancy? Is there any way to birdie cancer?

Gene Littler has won 25 tournaments. That makes him one of the registered giants of the game. He won this tournament three times in a row. He has won the U.S. Open. Not many living men can say that.

Attitude on Littler's Side

They said his "attitude" was a big part of Gene's game. He won or lost with a shrug. He played for money, not for history. He never could abide much of the publicity humbug that went with being a star in our era. Gene just showed up for work like the plumber, carpenter, electrician or milkman. He was a mechanic. He never expected to be adored for doing a good job. He came from a long line of people who did good jobs.

They said he was "colorless." They called him Gene The Machine. He didn't have armies, navies, fleas, banditos. Littler's "fans" were Mrs. Littler.

Well, not quite. A number of us who watched Littler over the years, who waited for the hat to get too small, the ego to begin to show, came slowly to realize Gene was not a golfer, he was a man. A helluva man.

You never heard Gene cry, complain, throw a club, snarl at a marshal. He never showed up in purple plaid pants. Shucks, he was on the tour 17 years and he never even got sunburned. He looked without rancor, prejudice, and sometimes without even interest on the world.

He was a homebody who played until he won the rent money, then went home by Labor Day to do the important work — raise a family. I never heard him raise his voice or his fist. You never heard him say a malicious or unkind thing.

I don't know anything about his religion — Gene's not the type of guy to talk about that — but I always figured he was the type of Christian Christ had in mind when he founded Christianity. That'll embarrass Gene, but it's high time somebody embarrassed him.

He was kind of an asthmatic kid but he had the most gorgeous, compact swing that could ever happen to a player. They said it would last "forever."

Well, "forever" was age 41. "Forever" was the other day. Gene Littler cannot raise his left arm high enough to comb his hair, never mind hit a four-iron.

He went to a doctor for a routine checkup a few months ago. He felt fine. The doctor was moved, for some reason, to check under Gene's armpits. The lump the sawbones found bothered him. But not nearly so much as what he found in the lump.

The idea of a cancer operation would scare most men into a dead faint. But Gene has always played the hole as it came up. Poker-faced, phlegmatic, pragmatic, he's got his driver out again. He thinks he's on the fairway. He smiled as he confronted the golfing press down here the other day.

"I'll be playing again by the end of the year. I'll probably be just as bad as I ever was," he grinned.

I don't know as it matters that Bobby Mitchell won the tournament here. But I do want Gene Littler to get his 26th career win. This is one sudden-death playoff where I really care. If anyone has the temperament to make the other guy blow up in this kind of a match, it's Gene Littler. So I'm betting he'll win his fourth tournament of champions. He always was toughest in the tourneys where they let the rough grow.

Littler

Rangers Need Cup Win To Beat Back Memories

NEW YORK Rangers are looking ahead, but the past stays with them and only 1972 Stanley Cup victory will beat back the intruding memories.

They don't concern past playoff failures because the Rangers sort of shot down the libel about not being able to "win the big ones" when they successively disposed of Montreal Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks. What can't be ignored even in the face of those triumps is their record against Boston Bruins.

The clubs who open the best-of-seven 1972 final on Sunday have met in seven previous playoff series — the 1927 and 1928 semi-finals, the 1929 final, the 1939, 1940 and 1958 semi-finals and in the 1970 quarter-finals.

MUCH STRONGER

Nothing can be gathered that is important now from the first six series (Boston won four of them) but the Bruins proved handily the better club in 1970, winning by four games to two and outscoring their rivals, 25-16.

"But", says New York coach Emile Francis, "this Ranger team is much stronger now than the one that lost in 1970. It has a lot of new faces.

NEW FACES

Since that 1970 series, the Rangers point out, they have added goalkeeper Gilles Villemure, defencemen Dale Rolfe, Gary Doak, and Jim Dorey and forwards Bobby Rousseau, Pete Stemkowski, Bruce MacGregor, Glen Sather and Gene Carr and veteran Phil Goyette joined their ranks just before the playoff start.

However, gone from the 1970 Rangers are defenceman Tim Horton, Al Hamilton and Arnie Brown and forwards Orland Kurtenbach, Jack Egers, Bob Nevin and Dave Balon.

TURNOVER HELPFUL

It is generally conceded that the talent turnover has been beneficial, but it remains to be seen whether the gain has been enough. It can also be argued that the Bruins have also improved in the past two seasons.

The National League's East Division champions haven't had as many changes as the Rangers but they have added proven quality in forward Mike Walton and defenceman Carol Vadnais, and Garnet Bailey is a rugged, capable youngster.

EXCHANGES A PLUS

The Bruins count the exchanges a plus and can point to the fact that Phil Esposito has blossomed into a sensational scorer in the past two seasons while linemate Wayne Cashman has developed into a standout two-way player.

It would be all academic at the moment but for the facts of the past season. The Rangers blew into Boston on Oct. 10 and ruined the Bruins' home opener, then fell flat on the promise of the impressive 4-1 victory.

EXTRA MOTIVATION

In five subsequent meetings, the Rangers only scored four goals while the Bruins, reportedly given an extra motivation by disparaging remarks made by New York defenceman Brad Park in his book "Play The Man," scored 24. It was 6-1, 4-1 and 2-0 in the three New York meetings and 8-1 and 4-1 in the last two Boston faceups.

Brimming with confidence after their two fine playoff conquests, Rangers dismiss those results almost airily.

"It's a new season now," claims MacGregor. "When you get into the playoffs, especially the final, what happened in the past doesn't mean that much any more."

"The way we've been playing I can't imagine any team defeating us," says captain Vic Hadfield.

There is more restraint in the camp of the Bruins, who give Rangers full respect.

Coach Tom Johnson, who volunteered that "only a great club" could eliminate Montreal and then take Chicago in four games, indicated his club wasn't overawed.

"I have to think we have something," he said, "so the way I look at it is that they will have to come to us. They will have to try us on for size and then see which way it goes."

There was perhaps a hint there that the final will be more physical than the two previous series involving the Rangers. However, the Rangers have now some muscle of their own. It promises to be a fine series. The Rangers are motivated by their desire to prove they do not flop when it's crucial while the Bruins, who probably would have preferred a revenge shot at Canadiens, are still smarting from the quarter-final upset a year ago. And they don't like Park.

Bucyk Leads Bruin Pack On Playoff Scoring List

Boston Bruins, who set a record for a four-game series in the semi-final triumph over St. Louis Blues, have the top four scorers in the Stanley Cup playdowns.

Veteran-leftwinger John Bucyk is on top with 17 points, one more than Phil Esposito and Bobby Orr and three more than John McKenzie.

Orr set a playoff record by getting 14 assists from the nine games the first two series required and has a minimum of four games in which to add to it. However, Bucyk and Esposito, who leads in goals with nine will both have to be at their most effective if they are to erase records for most points and most goals.

Bucyk needs to get 11 points against the New York Rangers to gain the record for most points for one playoff year, set by Esposito in 1970 and tied by Frank Mahovlich last year, while Esposito needs six goals in the final to erase the mark of 14 set by Mahovlich last year.

A feature of the Boston performance to date has been the play of the Fred Stanfield-Bucyk-McKenzie line. It has accounted for 19 goals and 44 points to take over from Esposito's unit as the most-dangerous Boston line.

The Rangers have so far been led in playoff scoring by Bobby Rousseau, who has performed brilliantly as the replacement for Jean Ratelle on the top New York line. The former Montreal star has four goals and 13 points one more than linemate Vic Hadfield, whose 12 points included six goals.

Bill Fairbairn is next on the Ranger list with 10 points, five of them goals. But while the New York leaders have played one more game than the Bruins, their point totals measure up in that the Rangers faced the tougher opposition, eliminating Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks.

Expos Blast Dodgers To Give Astros Lead

Montreal Expos broke loose for 16 hits Thursday night and made Houston Astros the leaders in the National League's Western Division.

Early leader of the Eastern Division, Canada's only major league baseball club ended a three-game losing streak by besting Los Angeles Dodgers, 7-5.

Dodgers entered the game tied with the Astros, who weren't scheduled for Thursday action in a program which listed no action in the American League.

Ron Hunt hit run-scoring singles in the fourth and sixth innings to pace the Expos to a 4-0 lead but it was a three-run seventh inning which won it when the Dodgers rallied in the late innings.

Singles by Bob Bailey, Ken Singleton, Tim Foli and Denny Lemaster, a wild pitch and a sacrific fly produced the deciding three runs.

Victory kept the Expos in second place, one game behind the hurrying New York Mets, who made it six wins in a row by slipping past the outlucked San Diego Padres, 4-3.

Beaten for the fourth time by one run, the Padres were done in by Jerry Grote, who hit a home run and a run-scoring single, and Rusty Staub, who hit his first homer of the season.

Meanwhile, things continued to be tough for last year's division winners. The San Francisco Giants were outslugged, 7-6, by Philadelphia Phillies and the series-winning Pittsburgh Pirates were nipped, 5-4, by Cincinnati Reds.

A barage of home runs won it for the Phillies. Don Money hit for the circuit twice and Deron Johnson and rookie Greg Luzinski, who broke a 4-4 tie in the ninth inning, did it once each.

In Pittsburgh, where the home team got off to a 3-0 lead, the Reds won when a single by Ted Uhlaender, his first in the National League, and a sacrifice fly by Dennis Menke produced two runs.

Another Honor

For the fourth time in his Western Hockey League career, Andy Hebenton (above) has won the Fred J. Hume Cup, emblematic of the player who best combines gentlemanly behavior with playing ability. Hebenton, a former Victoria resident playing for Portland Buckaroos, was also the winner of the Lady Byng Trophy, the National Hockey League equivalent, in 1957 when he played for New York Rangers. In the poll of players, Hebenton picked up 249 of a possible 425 votes to beat Ron Buchanan of Denver by 76 votes.

Shamrocks Lure Talented Youth

Victoria Shamrocks added more depth and size Thursday with the signing of coveted Mainland youngster.

Team-manager Norm Kowalyk announced that John Kastelein, a six-foot, two-inch 215-pounder who played last year with the junior New Westminster Salmonbellies had been given his clearance and agreed to terms.

Kastelein, who has attended four workouts, is expected to arrive here on the weekend and should be in the lineup Wednesday when the Shamrocks open their home season in the Western Lacrosse Association.

Padres Replace Gomez

Zimmer

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Preston Gomez was fired Thursday as manager of San Diego Padres and third-base coach Don Zimmer, 41, was named to succeed him. Gomez directed the National League baseball club since it was formed in August, 1968.

The announcement was made by E. J. Buzzie Bavasi, club president. Bavasi said the change was made after he and Gomez had met for a short time earlier in the day.

"I explained to Preston why I thought a change in managers was necessary at this time," Bavasi said.

The Padres are in fourth place in the Western Division with a 4-7 record but have lost five of their last six games.

Zimmer, in his 23rd season in professional baseball, rejoined the Padres' organization this year. In 1969 he managed San Diego's farm team in Key West, Fla., and in 1970 handled the club's Salt Lake City team in the Pacific Coast League.

Zimmer was third-base coach at Montreal last season.

Blues, United Clash Here For Soccer Final Berth

United and Blues clash at 2 p.m. Saturday in the last Coast League match at Royal Athletic Park this season.

Paul's Canadians won the other sudden-death semi-final last Sunday and, if United beats Blues, the first meeting in the two-game, total-goal final will be in Vancouver Sunday, May 7, with the second clash at Centennial Stadium on Saturday, May 13.

But the Blues, coached by Sandy James, improved rapidly after a bad start and climbed from the basement into the playoffs.

Blues have won their last five games, including a 3-2 victory over Victoria Gorge Molsons in a clash to decide fourth place.

Much of this improvement has been due to the scoring feats of centre-forward, Ken Phillips, punter for the B.C. Lions of the Canadian Football League.

Tom Westwater, formerly of Victoria, and Peter Nolan have also done a lot toward getting the Blues into the playoffs.

If Irvine is fit, the starting lineup will be Barry Sadler in goal, Howie Anderson and Ray Telford in the fullback berths, Ranjit Dillon, Irvine and Brian Robinson as the half-back line and Dan Lomas, Ron Thompson, Tom Forrester, Pete Roberts and Jan Bentley as the forwards.

United's player awards for the season will be presented at half time.

Involvement Key To School Relays

Involvement is the key to what officials expect will be a highly successful fourth-annual All Schools Relays.

This year's meet opens at Esquimalt high school at 5 p.m. next Monday and continues Wednesday and Thursday evenings at Centennial Stadium.

And it has a new format. This time there will be no invitational events and instead more schools and more students will be involved.

More than 2000 athletes from some 60 schools, both public and private, are expected to take part in the three-day meet. Last year, about 1500 competed.

Main emphasis will be on relays with senior high, junior high and elementary schools all running 8x50 metres, 4x100, 4x200, 4x400 and 4x800 events.

Only other events on the track will be the 100 metres for all divisions, an 800-metre race for senior girls and a senior boys' mile.

As well there will be "cross-country" races, to be run around the outside of the tracks. The only field events will be high jump and shot put.

Mt. Douglas will be trying for its fourth straight senior high-school title. Last year, Mt. Doug easily won both boys' and girls' team titles. Oak Bay was second over all.

Lansdowne took honors in the junior high school division last season Gordon Head won the first two years.

Richmond will be trying for its third straight victory in the elementary school contest. Lake Hill won the elementary title first time out.

The Colonist Kingfisherman Salmon Contest opens Saturday morning for the eighteenth season. Top prize this year is a CP Air trip for two to Hong Kong, a hidden weight prize for any salmon five pounds or heavier and any bass or freshwater trout one pound or heavier caught by a Colonist subscriber.

The more serious anglers will be out to pick up Prince Buttons for the heaviest 25 fish each month in each of the three salmon categories and the 15 heaviest fish in each of the fresh water categories.

Oak Bay and Becher Bay waters are among the best bets to pick up chinook salmon buttons this opening weekend, but there are some other promising spots. Sansum Narrows and Chemainus waters are worth a try. Nanoose-Northwest Bay-French Creek waters have been producing the occasional large chinook and Campbell River has been producing good catches along the waterfront.

Saanich Inlet has been giving up a few chinooks at last, both in the Tod Inlet to Willis Point and McKenzie Bay waters and in Finlayson Arm.

Roy Smith picked up a 16.4-pounder and a 9.14-pounder on Sunday on Strip Teaser and flasher near Goldstream Island. Les Inglis boated a 20.4-pounder on Minnow Teaser in the same area and Vern Palliser clicked with a 14.12-pounder near Goldstream Island.

Blues are still being taken in Saanich Inlet on flies and are also spread out all the way from Nanaimo, where fishing has been good, through Nanoose, Clayton's, to French Creek and Qualicum off the claybanks.

But they get spread out a little thinner further north, and they have been far out . . . off the tip of Ballenas, and one mile from shore at Qualicum. They are also from Kelsey Bay to Rock Bay and just a mile from Deepwater Bay in up-Island waters.

Cowichan Lake is always the best early-season spot to catch a button-winning trout. The creek mouths are still the best spots but trollers have been taking them at the foot of the lake near the weir. For smaller fish, try Shawnigan, Dougan and some of the shallower lakes. Great Central and Sproat Lakes, of course, are worth while trying for those who want larger trout.

It is still a little cold in the Campbell River area but the shallower lakes that are not still snowed in are worth trying.

Steelhead are running late this year and there are still some to be caught in most rivers.

By CHARLES MAHER
Colonist - Los Angeles Times Service

But as all else has expanded, has quality diminished?

Thirteen years ago, in professional football, baseball, basketball and hockey, there were 42 major-league clubs and about 1050 players. By the end of 1972, if the new hockey league opens for business as planned, there will be 107 teams and about 2600 players.

So people will have more than twice as much sports . . . quantitively.

STRAPPE'S LAW

Qualitatively, we may run into a problem perhaps best defined by Strappe's Law (named for the legendary Jacques Strappe, who once organized a softball league for lefthanded Lithuanian pipefitters in Schenectady).

His law states:

"When the number of available roster positions in a given league exceeds the number of athletes qualified to fill those positions, there is likely to be a shortage of talent."

Some impartial observers will tell you the present quality of professional sports attests to the validity of Strappe's Law.

Even on the inside, you'll find some who speak candidly.

"I think," said Jerry West of Los Angeles Lakers, "that the quality of basketball has no doubt suffered somewhat . . . the strongest teams I saw in basketball were from about 1964 to 1968."

CAREERS PROLONGED

West said one effect of expansion has been to prolong playing careers. "I think there's a fallacy in most sports today," he said. "People say you need a wise old veteran for the stretch run, or to come in off the bench. I don't believe that."

"You mean a lot of these old guys are around just because of the scarcity of players?"

"Absolutely," Jerry said.

But West made a point of saying his sport has improved tremendously in another way. "When I started in 1960," he said, "basketball was probably a minor-league sport masquerading as a major-league sport. Now, when it comes to salaries and accommodations and things like that, it's really a major-league operation."

What about expansion and football? Can the product be as good as in 1959 when the number of players has increased from about 450 to about 1050?

"I don't think expansion has decreased quality," he said. I think defensively everybody's much better today. A lot of it has to do with training methods and diet.

"Another thing: I think that when there were only 12 teams, a lot of guys who were good enough to play couldn't. There was no room for them."

Alex Karras, for years a defensive tackle with Detroit, disagrees. "There are no teams today really loaded with good personnel," he said. "When I came into the league in 1958, I believe we had a 36-man player limit and only 12 clubs. There were three or four teams in the league that had tremendous personnel.

CAN BOUNCE AROUND

"When you turned 28, you were considered an old man. You were over the hill. Now they're talking 34, 35. A guy can bounce around for years. I probably could have played 'til I was 40 if I wanted to.

"And the competition itself is less. The ballplayer today figures if he can't make one team he can make another. I think competitive spirit is lacking today. The player takes his time about putting out. As a result, he may not round into a real good player for three or four years."

Baseball has expanded the least of the pro sports. The number of major league teams has increased only 50 per cent (from 16 to 24) since 1960.

"I think there was a little thinning of talent immediately after the expansions," said Dodger vice-president Al Campanis. "But I think the game is as strong as ever. I think clubs are better than in the early '50s, which I think was about the best period of all time up to then.

"The kids are bagger, faster and they've been taught better. Teaching has changed in the last 10 years."

REASON FOR ARGUMENT

There may be room for argument about the impact of expansion on basketball, football and baseball. Hockey is another story.

The NHL is expanding from 14 teams to 18 and the new World Hockey Association plans 12 teams. So there could be 30 in two years where there were six.

The trouble is, nearly all professional hockey players are produced in Canada, whose population is barely greater than California's. ducing players.

Bob Pulford, ex-Toronto star now with Los Angeles Kings, said the answer is for the United States to start pro-

"When we had six teams," he said, "there was no problem. But 30 hockey teams? This is where the States are going to have to develop players. Canada will produce more, but certainly not enough. Hockey must look to the colleges. If colleges here (in the United States) become a breeding ground, hockey's problem is over."

Overall, that's the story in pro sports. You start with people who will give anything to get into a league. So they give anything, and they get nothing. The nothing is then dressed in bright uniforms, given a heroic nickname and represented as a major league team.

Rugby Oldsters Form Committee

Wak-Waks started it all.

It was that announcement that the over-40 rugby players from Japan would pay a visit to B.C. in October.

Now, many who had hung up their boots some time ago have had a urge to get back into the game.

A group of Victoria Rugby Union oldsters have formed a committee which will organize games once a month until the Japanese visit. The officials also hope to continue through next rugby season.

Dave Mackenzie, a former Scottish international and one-time Olympic sprinter, is president of the group. Bob Hutchinson is secretary and M. P. B. Wrixon is in charge of publicity.

The over-40 (on Jan. 1) squad will be made up of former players living in Victoria and nearby areas, some still playing in the Victoria Union's second and third divisions. Several former internationals are expected to be in the side.

Clarke will give his "boys" their first run against Royal Roads Military College at the college at 2 p.m. Sunday.

That will be just the first step leading to the clash with the Wak-Waks at Royal Athletic Park, Oct. 4.

Crowds Down, Gate Up

SEATTLE (AP) — Fewer people spent more money to see Western Hockey League teams in action this season, Bill MacFarland, WHY president said Wednesday.

Seattle won only 12 of its 72 games and accounted for most of the league attendance drop with 97,000 fewer fans. Overall, league attendance was 1,032,233 — down 56,000 he said.

"Denver was up about 50 per cent," MacFarland said.

"Phoenix was up 35 per cent and San Diego up 14 per cent. San Diego had its biggest attendance in 1969-70, 302,000 paid, but this year the club drew more dollars even though their attendance was about the same as last year, while Salt Lake was down a little."

So what?
Most of the people who buy our Evinrude Starflite V-4's aren't racers. They just want the best engine they can buy, from whoever makes the best engines.
Setting the world's outboard speed record and holding it for 11 years has taught us a lot about how to build faster, stronger, more reliable production engines. That's why the big Evinrudes (the 85, 100 and the new 125) are all V-4's. The tougher, shorter V-4 crankshaft can take a lot more than conventional in-line crankshafts. And deliver a lot more, too. Evinrude's V-4 design also cuts down on engine height for greater stability when the going gets rough.
We think our 131 mph. record has helped give you a better outboard. And if our competition didn't think so, why are they still trying to beat it?

Harness Racing Dropped

CALGARY (CP) — The Calgary Exhibition and Stampede Board said Thursday there will be no harness racing in the city this year, mainly because it lost $60,000 during the 1971 operation.

Owners said the loss was mainly the result of a poorly publicized and badly conducted August meeting last year, adding an October meet came close to breaking even.

Stampede officials said harness racing will be held in Calgary when a new grandstand and race track are constructed, a date still indefinite.

Distillery Wins

Nelson Golf Opening Delayed

DALLAS (AP) — A severe thunderstorm forced cancellation of Thursday's scheduled opening round in the $125,000 Byron Nelson Golf Classic.

Officials scheduled single rounds for Friday and Saturday and a double round on Sunday.

Defending Champions Top Event

Both defending champions in the 42nd annual Empress golf tournament at Victoria Golf Club were successful Thursday.

Willard Soames, a 78-year-old Empress tournament veteran from Seattle, took the men's title with a net 198, five strokes less than Howard McCarthy of Calgary. Bob Long and Bob Davis, both of Tacoma finished in a third-place tie with 204.

Shirley Laws, also of Seattle, retained the women's title with a three-round total of 241, beating Kathy King of Burlington, Wash., by three strokes.

In the international team competition, Canada beat the United States by seven strokes while Alberta took the district event by topping Washington State. B.C. was third and Oregon fourth.

Girls Canada's Top Hopes

Debbie Brill May Quit

MONTREAL (CP) — Maurice Allen, chef de mission of Canada's team going to the Olympic Games in Munich this August, says the girls likely will outshine the boys again.

"There were 43 Canadian competitors in Mexico in 1968," he said. "Right now it would appear we will have about 200 athletes in Munich.

"We should have half a dozen archers — three male and three female — and whereas we had no pentathlon at Mexico City, we shall have a small pentathlon team this time."

Stressing that, with no trials yet completed, he was going on past performance, Allen said:

"We expect to have a good team. Once again it appears our girls are going to be better than our boys.

"Just look at divers Liz Carruthers, Bev Boys and Nancy Robertson. They're all up in world class.

"The same applies in swimming — Donna-Marie Gurr and Leslie Cliff, both of Vancouver, won three golds each at the Pan-American Games. All in all, the girls seem stronger in swimming than our men.

"The same appears to be true in track and field. Debbie Vankiekebelt is sixth or seventh in the world in pentathlon. Debbie Brill is up there with the best in the high jump."

Whether Debbie Brill jumps for Canada at Munich — or even enters the trials — is in doubt. Reports from the West Coast were that the tough-minded young competitor planned to leave the sport.

"Our equestrians have been good ever since Mexico," Allen said. I hope they'll keep going — there would be no surprise as in 1968 if they came up with medals this time.

"Yachting has a very intensive training program. They, too, could come up with something."

"I have two very good assistants in Dick Pound and Don Goodwin," Allen says.

Pound was a swimmer on the 1960 Canadian relay team. Goodwin, with the CBC in Toronto, has a background in amateur sport and "because of his news experience, will be primarily liaison with the press of Canada in Munich," Allen says.

Pound, of Montreal, and Goodwin both speak French and English.

Allen says he realizes it is "tough to set standards in some sports — fencing, boxing, judo and wrestling, for instance."

"But after discussion with various sports governing bodies, in sports such as archery, track and field, swimming, gymnastics, weightlifting, and cycling, we are setting up team standards in some cases stiffer than international federation standards.

"In team sports, it's a little different. Zone competition has a bearing; qualification in some team sports is based on Pan-American Games performances."

WATER CONSUMERS
IN GREATER VICTORIA
Discolored Water — Low Pressure
All water consumers served by the Greater Victoria Water District are warned that between 8 p.m. Friday, April 28 and Sunday, April 30, 1972, water may be discolored and pressure lower than normal.
The District will be installing a 42 inch valve in the 48 inch diameter pipeline into Victoria, starting at 8:00 p.m. Friday and work should be completed early Saturday morning. While this work is going on, the 48 inch pipeline will be out of service and water will be routed through smaller pipelines where the higher velocities may pick up sediment and rust and scatter it into parts of the distribution system.
The water will be safe to consume, and any discoloration should disappear by Sunday, but please check for discoloration or sediment before commencing any washing or process requiring clean water.

Curtis Jibs At Survey

Capital Regional Board chairman Hugh Curtis said Thursday that he wished to disassociate himself from a proposal by regional planner Tony Roberts, to spend $10,000 for a survey of "visual pollution on the Island highway."

Roberts had made the proposal at a board meeting Wednesday, but Curtis said that he had forwarded his own views to Highways Minister Wesley Black and Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell.

Curtis said that the only survey necessary was for "someone to drive from Victoria to Nanaimo and photograph the ugly spots."

Saanich Police Seek Vancouver Salaries

Members of the Saanich Police Union have declined to participate in regional salary bargaining and are pressing for parity with their Vancouver colleagues, Mayor Hugh Curtis said Thursday.

Curtis, who is chairman of the municipality's police commission, said the commission has had one meeting to discuss the issue and has referred it to a sub-committee.

The contracts with members of Saanich's police and fire departments expired March 31. Negotiations with members of the firefighters' union, which have not yet opened, may be held on a regional basis.

Curtis said that while the police union has decided it won't participate in regional bargaining, the municipality will be closely watching the progress in negotiations in other areas, including Victoria, where one exploratory meeting has been held between representatives of the city and its policemen.

Victoria School Tax Lowered by .87 Mill

The Greater Victoria school board formally set its 1972 mill rate Thursday night at an average of 31.11 mills.

The rate is down .87 mills from last year and was set at a special board meeting which also adopted the budget for this year.

Larger government operating grants this year are the main reason for the lower mill rate.

Total expenditures for the year will be $26,812,311 compared to $25,077,608 spent in 1970-71.

Of this year's amount, the tax rate will be used to raise $12,617,833 from Victoria, Esquimalt, Oak Bay, the southern portion of Saanich and some rural areas.

Will It Be Victoria General?

Queen Victoria General Hospital may not be the name after all.

Members of Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society attending the organization's fourth annual meeting Thursday night decided that the hospital instead should be called Victoria General Hospital.

The attack on the name Queen Victoria General was pressed by doctors who practise there. The debate lasted just over one hour.

"This is a very large institution, a major Canadian hospital," stated Dr. J. L. Heffernan, president of the medical staff. "Queen Victoria General Hospital will tell you nothing. Victoria General will tell you it is in a metropolitan area and that the hospital is involved in the community."

After settling a number of procedural issues, the society's membership voted 85-11 in favor of the switch in name of the former St. Joseph's Hospital, which was renamed at the insistence of its previous owners, the Sisters of St. Ann.

However, the decision of the society is nothing more than a recommendation to the provincial government.

The facts are that the government is the hospital's owner, leasing it to the hospital society and no amendment can be made to a hospital society's constitution without the consent of Health Minister Ralph Loffmark. A change in name involves such an amendment.

If Loffmark and other government officials assent, the name will be changed by a cabinet order, similar to the order of March 17 that permitted the switch from St. Joseph's to Queen Victoria General.

Hospital Records Surplus

Queen Victoria General Hospital came through 1971 with a small surplus of $6,000 from a budget of $8.9 million, it was disclosed Thursday night.

It was the fourth consecutive year that the hospital, formerly called St. Joseph's, has had a surplus after B.C. Hospital Insurance Service adjusted the payments made on behalf of patients.

The annual meeting of the Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society, which is managing the hospital, also was told that the average patient stay once again was reduced — this time to 9.6 days from 9.8 in 1970.

During the year, it admitted 15,018 persons, compared with 14,663 in 1970. Just over 8,000 of those patients were in surgery.

Yee Spree Forgiven

Sympathetic Victoria policemen must have decided Thursday was a bad enough day for Mrs. Sophia Yee, 735 Princess — their report on her accident at Bay and Blanshard said no charges were contemplated due to her lack of driving experience.

Mrs. Yee was turning left onto Blanshard from Bay at 8:45 a.m. when her car swung too wide and she hit a hydrant on Blanshard 50 feet south of Bay, breaking it at the base. The police report said she had obtained her driver's licence only the day before.

Cardiologists Told

Life in High Regions May Favor Hearts

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Two cardiologists said Thursday that people may be able to avoid heart attacks by moving to high altitudes.

Several recent studies all clearly point in this direction, the ninth Inter-American Congress of Cardiology was told.

Scientists have long believed that persons living in the high Andes of South America have low blood pressure and little heart disease.

But they did not have conclusive proof. Nor did they know the effects on a person living at sea level who moves to the high mountains.

Dr. Javier Arias-Stella of Lima, Peru, told of a recent study of 100 U.S. workers who went for two to 15 years to the La Oroja mine in Peru at an altitude of 12,200 feet. The Americans maintained their own customs, eating, smoking and drinking as at home.

Normally, blood pressures increases with age. But with time the systolic pressure of the Americans at the mine sharply decreased. Their diastolic pressure remained about the same.

High blood pressure, which damages the blood vessels and heart, is one of the two main causes of heart attacks.

The other is atherosclerosis, a condition in which deposits of fatty substance make the artery walls thick and irregular, leading to the artery's blockage.

The body's defence against this condition is the development of a collateral system of veins through which blood then flows.

But Arias-Stella said four studies, by other researchers, now show that people who live at 12,000 feet have much less atherosclerosis than other people. They also have low blood pressure.

And Arias-Stella's own autopsy studies of Andean natives show their number of collateral channels is substantially greater than those of other people.

Oil Spill Air Watch

Beginning next month a closer watch will be kept on oil pollution by shipping, infractions of fishing regulations and marine distress incidents along the B.C. coast, it was announced Thursday by the defence department.

Key to the increased surveillance will be the arrival May 1 at Patricia Bay airport of four twin-engine Tracker aircraft from Canadian Forces Base Shearwater near Halifax.

The planes with a crew of four will make daily flights along the B.C. coast.

OTTAWA (CP) — A government bill to narrow the scope of family allowance payments by channelling more money into lower-income households was given second reading in the Commons Thursday by a vote of 135 to 22.

The vote came after an unusually-lengthy second-reading debate — nine Commons days — caused mainly by vehement New Democrat opposition to the bill.

NDP members won support from several Conservative and Social Credit speakers in maintaining that the proposed alteration of the now-universal baby bonus plan would polarize society into the "poor" who would receive the new benefits and the "rich" who wouldn't.

Water Talks Urged

WASHINGTON (CP) — A senator from the water-short United States West urged Thursday that the U.S. begin discussions with Canada and Mexico aimed at a possible continental water policy.

Senator Frank Moss (D—Utah) also suggested vast quantities of Alaskan water could be fed to U.S. southwest Pacific states. But he noted such a project would require "the aid of Canada and the Columbia North Pacific region of the U.S. through which water would pass if conveyed overland to the Southwest."

While urging President Nixon to propose continuing technical exchanges with Canada, he said that in the past some Canadian "have been offended by what seemed to them to be ill-considered or even greedy policies on the part of Americans" in regard to water-sharing.

Moss said in a Senate speech that the Canada-U.S. Great Lakes water quality agreement, signed during Nixon's recent state visit to Canada, "is clearly the first step toward an eventual consultative arrangement on the care and constructive utilization of waters in other parts of the continent."

Some elements in Canada have been vocal in their opposition to any scheme in which Canada would grant to the U.S. fresh water they fear Canada mght need in the future.

Canadian Energy Minister Donald MacDonald said in a Toronto interview this week that Canada is firmly against selling Canadian water to the U.S., adding: "I don't see why we should solve U.S. water needs. Once you commit yourself to selling something like water — you can't get it back even if you need it yourself."

Rolling Stones Tour Starts in Vancouver

By ROBERT HILBURN
Colonist - Los Angeles Times Service

HOLLYWOOD — Here come the rolling Stones. Yes, after all the delays and false reports about the Stones' long-awaited new Canada-U.S. tour, it is now official.

The Stones are going on a 31-city tour, the group's first in the United States in more than two years. It begins June 3 in Vancouver, includes a mammoth Fourth of July show at J.F.K. Stadium in Washington, D.C., and ends with a three-night stand July 24-26 at New York's Madison Square Garden.

The group deliberately wanted to play smaller halls on this tour, said Marshall Chess, the head of the Stones' record label and one of those closest to the group.

"Initially, we talked about only playing small halls, but we realized there would be such a demand for tickets that it wouldn't be fair to the people who want to see the group," Chess added, "So they decided to mix some smaller halls with some larger ones, kind of a compromise."

Chess said Mick Jagger and Keith Richard specifically wanted to play the Palladium here about 5,000 capacity) because they had seen some rock concerts there (T. Rex and Chuck Berry) and enjoyed the intensity of feeling that is generated in the room. "It is a lot like the English ballroom circuit," Chess said. "They like the feel of it."

The group will begin rehearsals early next month in France, moving to Southern California later in May for the final week or so of rehearsals.

"As I understand it now, there will be a lot of material from the Sticky Fingers album and earlier albums on the first few dates, But more and more songs from the new album will be substituted once the tour gets going," Chess said. The new album, a two-record set titled Exile 'on Main Street is due the week of May 15.

"It's our view that it is much easier for an audience to get into a song once they've heard it on record," Chess continued. "So by the time the tour is well under way, the audiences will have heard the tunes on the new album and the Stones will use a lot of them."

Joining the Stones for the tour will be Bobby Keys on saxophone, Jim Price on trumpet and Nicky Hopkins on piano, each of whom was on the group's English tour last spring.

Pop Singer Collapses

LONDON (UPI) — American popular singer Jack Jones, suffering from "complete and total exhaustion," collapsed Thursday and cancelled the remainder of his current British tour, his British manager said.

Impresario Harold Davison said the 34-year-old Jones, who shot to fame a decade ago with Lollipops and Roses, will be flown back to the United States Friday and has been ordered by doctors to take a minimum of two weeks' rest.

"Jack is suffering from complete and total exhaustion and the doctors are most concerned about his health," Davison said.

Female trumpet player June Peters, who was paid $150 to entertain at civil servants' convention in London, Ont. three years ago, may or may not have been offended to learn she later wound up as invoice item labeled "display services." Thomas Smith, clerk in provincial auditor's department cited the payment as example of a dummy invoice, in testimony before public accounts committee said original invoice for entertainment was replaced.

British Woo Irish Factions

BELFAST (AP) — Britain made a new pitch for peace in Northern Ireland Thursday, lifting its ban on political parades and pardoning demonstrators jailed or fined for marching against the law.

The amnesty set aside prison sentences imposed on Bernadette Devlin and Frank McManus, both civil rights campaigners and members of the British Parliament.

The move by Northern Ireland's British administrator, William Whitelaw, was immediately welcomed by both the feuding Roman Catholic and Protestant communities.

Whitelaw's action was part of a political plan to ease tension in the province where 315 persons have died in 31 months of civil strife.

But Whitelaw will still ban any parade if he considers it may lead to violence.

The ruling means that traditional parades such as that of the Protestant Orange Order on July 12 and of the Catholic Ancient Order of Hibernians on Aug. 15 will be allowed.

It also means that Miss Devlin, the 24-year-old Catholic firebrand, and McManus will escape jail sentences imposed April 17. The sentences were passed after both took part in a march in Newry in February to protest the killing of 13 civilians in Londonderry's "Bloody Sunday" clashes.

Edward McAteer, president of the Catholic-oriented Nationalist party, welcomed the lifting of the ban and said he rejoiced "that faint traces of common sense were beginning to appear in the political sky."

Rev. Robert Dickinson, a prominent member of the Orange order, said he was pleased. The decision was also hailed by the Northern Ireland Civil Rights Association, which has defied the ban on several occasions.

Whitelaw's amnesty extends from last Christmas day. Persons who paid fines for defying the ban after that date will have their money refunded.

Earlier, the focus of attention in Northern Ireland was on a Belfast court.

On the basis of her testimony on the April 9 attack, three youths, who pleaded not guilty, were ordered to stand trial next month. The reason for the attack was not disclosed.

The provisional wing of the outlawed Irish Republican Army had earlier claimed responsibility for the incident which outraged Roman Catholics in the Ballymurphy district, largely controlled by the IRA.

Although Mrs. McGucken, a Catholic, made no mention of the IRA in her testimony, her appearance in court was something of a breakthrough. Earlier victims of IRA violence had been reluctant to testify.

Elsewhere, there was mounting evidence of a growing split between the IRA guerrillas and the Catholic communities they count on for support.

In Londonderry's Catholic Bogside enclave, controlled by the IRA, a delegation of 20 women called on IRA headquarters and demanded an end to the shooting on their street, Demesne Avenue.

Macaulay, South Park

Students Plan Cleanup Day

Pupils at Macaulay and South Park elementary schools will mark Environment Day on Monday with films, bottle drives, and general cleanups of the areas near their schools.

Macaulay principal Hector Sutherland said Thursday that all pupils from kindergarten through Grade 7 will take part in the special day.

All pupils will take part in a street and boulevard cleanup of the streets near the school at 1010 Wychbury. Then some will collect bottles and cans from throughout the school's attendance areas.

More will clean up Fleming Beach, and still others will clean up and tidy a parcel of undeveloped school board property obtained from the defence department.

Shrubs and bushes will also be planted to beautify the school grounds, Sutherland said.

The wood picked up at Fleming Beach will be sold to area residents at 15 cents a box. All money raised from the wood sale and the bottle drive will be used to buy plants for decoration of the school garden and grounds.

At South Park the morning will be spent in discussions and films about pollution, ecological carelessness and how to stop it.

During the afternoon 50 students will knock on doors to collect recyclable materials to take to Project Recycle. Other groups of students will work at Project Recycle and will clean up debris in neighborhood parks.

Another group will walk around James Bay and take photographs of pollution they see. From the photographs, a slide show for the school will be prepared.

The education department has recommended in a circular that on Environment Day "the regular school program will be suspended and replaced with supervised meaningful activities associated with environmental conditions."

Grant for Art Catalogue

The Art Gallery of Greater Victoria has been awarded a $14,000 Canada Council grant to publish a catalogue of its famed Japanese collection.

This art collection, says curator Colin Graham, has gained international fame and is scheduled for display in December at the Royal Ontario Museum, Toronto, and later at the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts.

Scholars from the Royal Ontario Museum and from the Centre for Asian Arts in Seattle have for months, Graham said, been preparing the text for the catalogue, which will not only be used for the eastern exhibits but also as a handbook for the collection.

It will have a hard cover and will include color reproductions of some pieces from the Japanese collection.

Acting Mayor Rotates Again

A return to the system in which the position of acting mayor is held by aldermen on a rotating basis was agreed upon Thursday by Victoria council.

Young
. . . mayor's wish

Council, after a brief discussion, relieved Ald. Percy Frampton of his "permanent position" as acting mayor — four months after it established him in the role.

Mayor Peter Pollen, who recommended to council that Frampton be ejected from the position effective Sunday, told council "I wouldn't like to read any more into the recommendation."

Frampton had said Wednesday that he was convinced the motion was a result of his opposition to Pollen's anti-highrise policy.

The alderman vacated his seat while the motion was discussed by council.

Ald. Mike Young, who supported Pollen's recommendation, said "my feeling is that the mayor's wish should be given substantial consideration by council."

"I would suggest the mayor is in the best position to decide who the best person or persons are (to assume the role of acting mayor)."

Ald. Harold Olafson was the only council member to oppose the vote.

The policy of having a permanent acting mayor was established by Pollen at the beginning of his term in January. Previously, aldermen held the position on a rotating basis.

Four aldermen will serve as acting mayor for two months each — Ald. Clyde Savage during May and June; Ald. Tom Christie during July and August, Olafson during September and October; Ald. Ove Witt during November and December.

In other business, council:

- Formally approved a bylaw which gives a 6.5 per cent mayoral and aldermanic salary increase. Aldermen will be paid $3,834, an increase of $234. The mayor's salary will go to $15,975 from $15,000.
- Formally approved a 20-year lease renewal by the city for the Victoria Curling Club's arena site at 1952 Quadra.
- Endorsed an April 18 Committee B recommendation that the city solicitor be instructed to prepare a bylaw which would regulate and control the development of service stations and automated car wash facilities in the city.

The bylaw will be prepared in the form of an amendment to the existing zoning bylaw.

Victoria Budget Review Entering Final Sessions

Victoria's 1972 budget will receive its first official review by city council's committee of the whole early next week.

City officials said Thursday that tentative date for the meeting is Tuesday and have indicated that the tax increase will likely be less than three mills.

The provisional budget first presented to aldermen last December would have involved a tax increase of about six mills.

Extensive cuts have been made since then at meetings attended by Mayor Peter Pollen, committee chairmen and city officials.

City manager Bill Hooson said a final revision of the document to be presented to council members next week has been made by himself, the mayor, finance committee chairman Ald. Tom Christie and city officials.

Impaired Appeal Denied

Unanimous

Elected by acclamation as Victoria County Bar Association representative on Canadian Bar Association's national council is Victoria-born lawyer Cecil Branson, 37. Victoria group has three members on council with one three-year term coming open each year and Branson was only person nominated as newest member.

Drake said he must uphold the conviction of Dennis Wayne Rutherford, 28, of 2414 Dalhousie, on the charge which arose out of a traffic accident in which Rutherford was involved about 1:40 a.m. Oct. 11.

He had been convicted by Victoria Provincial Court Judge E. F. N. Robinson on Nov. 16, and had appealed by means of a trial de novo, which meant that an entirely new trial was held on the case before Drake.

Defence lawyer Dermod Owen-Flood submitted evidence to show that signs of impairment displayed by Rutherford after the accident might have been caused by injuries he suffered in the crash or by codeine he had taken for them rather than by alcohol.

Drake said he agreed this might well be the case, but noted that the nature of the accident and the fact that Rutherford had admitted to drinking shortly before the accident must also be taken into consideration.

He could conclude only that it was the drinking that got him into the accident which "no person with his wits about him would get into," he said.

Big City Shut By Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) —Vancouver became the second major Canadian centre this month to be hit by a civic workers' strike when 2,600 union members left their jobs in a surprise walkout Thursday morning.

The walkout, by 1,400 inside workers and 1,200 outside workers, leaves Vancouver without garbage pickup, municipal maintenance crews and a myriad of other services.

Two weeks ago, Toronto's civic workers hit the bricks to back wage demands in a new contract. The eastern city is slowly being buried under mountains of rotting garbage.

The strike here began when 1,400 inside workers started picketing at 6:30 a.m. It took everybody by surprise — including the outside workers, who belong to a different union.

Outside workers' leaders hurriedly organized membership meeting, at which it was decided to follow the lead of the inside workers. The strike involves the city only — not such suburbs as Burnaby, North and West Vancouver or Richmond.

"The object is to shut down everything," said Ken Derby, assistant business agent for the Municipal and Regional Employees' Union, which bargains for the inside workers.

A few hours later, Dave Werlin, spokesman for the outside workers, who belong to the Canadian Union of Public Employees, reported: "The city is now shut down."

The strike plans were made late Wednesday and some members of the MREU did not know it was on until they reported for work.

Picket lines ringed the public safety building but policemen were allowed to pass and continue work. No pickets appeared at city firehalls and firemen also continued normal duties.

Derby said the union decided to strike because it felt it was getting "the runaround" from the municipal negotiating team.

Generally the walkout paralyzed normal operations and Commissioner Lorne Ryan declared from his city hall office: "All we can do is answer the phones."

Maintenance of traffic lights ceased when union electricians refused to cross picket lines.

Last-ditch negotiations went on all day Monday between municipal negotiators and inside workers. The talks were wrapped in a news blackout.

Quebec's Unionists Disagree

QUEBEC (CP) — Three executive members of the Confederation of National Trade Unions criticized president Marcel Pepin Thursday for risking possible violence in recommending that striking public service employees defy emergency back-to-work legislation.

The criticism came in a statement from Paul Emile Dalpe, vice-president, Jacques Dion, treasurer, and Adedee Daigle, director of services.

In other developments, two more unions and six officers were given fines and prison sentences Thursday for contempt of court in defying strike-related injunctions.

Mr. Justice George Pelletier of Quebec Superior Court fined a hospital service union at St. Joseph Hospital in Riviere du Loup $10,000. Three of its officers were dealt prison terms of three months each and individual fines of $2,500.

A maintenance workers union at Jewish Hospital of Hope in Montreal was fined $2,500 while three of its officers were each sentenced to month-long jail stays and $1,000 fines.

As the construction industry and 18 unions prepared for today's province-wide lockout, there didn't appear to be any ready acceptance of Premier Bennett's surprising and somewhat reluctant offer to serve as an arbitrator.

There was no official comment from either the Construction Labor Relations Association, which represents 840 contractors, or the 57,000-member B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council.

CLRA president C. J. Connaghan said he would have no comment until he is approached by the premier.

Major problems could be er Victoria school district by try shutdown scheduled from

Trustee Peter Bunn, chairman of the school board's construction and maintenance committee, said any shutdown, especially one that lasted two weeks or more, would mean that current building projects could not be finished by the beginning of the new school year in September.

And that would mean that students would be forced to remain in overcrowded and in some cases, inadequately equipped classrooms until the projects were finally completed.

School Routines

School routines would be disrupted by having workmen throughout the buildings doing necessary renovations which should have been done in holiday time.

And students and teachers would have to make the move into new quarters in mid-year, just after they had become settled in the old ones.

"There's no doubt it will be the kids who will suffer in the end if there's a shutdown," Bunn said.

One of the most serious situations is at McKenzie elementary, 548 McKenzie, he said. There work is being done on a five-classroom addition and a library with an August completion date.

If the addition isn't finished, the McKenzie students will remain in overcrowded facilities and in a maze of portable classrooms.

At the same time the portables will not become available to be distributed to other schools where they are needed to relieve overcrowding, Bunn said.

The board has counted on them in calculating its space allocations for next year, so if they have to remain at McKenzie, overcrowding will continue at other schools as well.

Bad Situation

The other especially bad situation exists at Mount Douglas high and Cedar Hill junior high, he said. Both schools are scheduled for six-classroom additions and new science laboratory rooms by the fall.

Both are in the rapidly-growing Cedar Hill-Gordon Head area where school populations, especially in the high schools, are growing the fastest of anywhere in the district.

The schools are already overcrowded, increases in pupil loads are expected in the fall and if the additions are not ready, "it will just make a bad situation worse for longer," Bunn said.

The new laboratory facilities are also badly needed to

Unions Braced for Province Lockout

Bennett Offers To Arbitrate

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

As the construction industry and 18 unions prepared for today's province-wide lockout, there didn't appear to be any ready acceptance of Premier Bennett's surprising and somewhat reluctant offer to serve as an arbitrator.

There was no official comment from either the Construction Labor Relations Association, which represents 840 contractors, or the 57,000-member B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council.

CLRA president C. J. Connaghan said he would have no comment until he is approached by the premier.

However, some sources expressed both amusement and doubt concerning the seriousness of Bennett's offer.

His ability in such a role was also questioned.

"It's not something I would choose to do," the premier said in a Vancouver interview shortly after his return to B.C. from a trip to eastern Canada and the U.S.

He said if he did take on the job the parties would have to agree beforehand to accept binding settlement.

"It would be a difficult job but it would be my duty if they can't get anybody else," he said.

The lockout, which CLRA says could idle up to 30,000 tradesmen and halt $500 million in construction, is scheduled for 4:30 p.m. today. The effect won't be felt until Monday morning when the next normal work week begins.

It follows failure by the unions and CLRA to come to terms on new agreements. The last contracts expired March 31.

One union official said of Bennett's offer:

"The man has considerable knowledge in the field of politics. But he certainly doesn't know enough about the construction industry to be suitable as a mediator."

A contractor said he wondered if Bennett might be "putting up a trial balloon" to see what the thinking was on the question of arbitration — something that is being advocated often these days as an eventual replacement for the strike or lockout weapon.

"There's got to be a better answer than what we've got now," he said. "A dispute such as this gets settled eventually — it has to be. But in the meantime it is very expensive in terms of productivity and the health of the economy."

He said $1.4 million in wages would be lost daily during the lockout.

While the lockout would be expected to affect 30,000 tradesmen, if it lasts long enough it will create a job loss in supporting industries such as supply, manufacturing and service, the contractor said.

Labor Minister James Chabot said he didn't anticipate any action on the part of the government this week or next week. Meanwhile, he will be watching the situation closely, he said.

There had been a suggestion by Bennett that Chabot was looking for an acceptable arbitrator for the dispute. But Chabot said this is not the case at the moment.

"I suggested to them (both parties) Monday that they give consideration to voluntary binding arbitration and the suggestion was rejected out of hand," Chabot said.

Some unions and CLRA have renewed contact. The ironworkers have agreed to meet again this weekend. But the lockout stands.

Figures in the Victoria office of the Amalgamated Construction Association show that close to $14.5 million in major projects will be affected by the lockout.

The unions say they are continuing to sign agreements with independent contractors. They also claim some CLRA contractors are looking for a means to avoid the shutdown.

The electrical workers in Victoria say they have contract with eight independents and that this will provide work for 50 of the 250 inside men.

Lockout Could Cramp Schools

By BARBARA McLINTOCK
Colonist Reporter

Major problems could be created for the Greater Victoria school district by the construction industry shutdown scheduled from 4:30 p.m. today.

Trustee Peter Bunn, chairman of the school board's construction and maintenance committee, said any shutdown, especially one that lasted two weeks or more, would mean that current building projects could not be finished by the beginning of the new school year in September.

And that would mean that students would be forced to remain in overcrowded and in some cases, inadequately equipped classrooms until the projects were finally completed.

The schools are already overcrowded, increases in pupil loads are expected in the fall and if the additions are not ready, "it will just make a bad situation worse for longer," Bunn said.

The new laboratory facilities are also badly needed to update and expand the present ones in both schools.

Other projects which will be held up by a shutdown will cause inconvenience, but not be so serious, he said. Mainly they involve the building of libraries or activity rooms rather than classrooms.

Gulf Oil Opts Out

A terse letter from Gulf Oil Ltd. which denied any responsibility for the existence of a service station at Hillside and Scott was termed "irresponsible" and "disgusting" by Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen Thursday.

The letter from the petroleum company's office in Vancouver was read aloud to Victoria council. It had been addressed to city clerk R.M. Waller.

"We wish to advise that Gulf Oil is not the owner of the above property (at Scott and Hillside)" said the letter which was dated Monday.

The one-sentence letter said Gulf Oil therefore could not comment on the limited commercial zoning bylaw in Victoria.

The service station in question is now a Mohawk station. It was formerly a Gulf Oil station, but was sold by Gulf to Mohawk.

Gulf Oil was granted permission last year to build a large service centre at Hillside and Shelbourne under the condition that the company phase out three or four smaller stations in the area.

The station currently operated by Mohawk was one of the smaller service stations Gulf Oil promised to phase out, according to Victoria aldermen.

Pollen and the aldermen, who attacked the company's "most innocuous" stand in the letter, were initially going to take no action on it.

But after some discussion, council agreed to ask the oil company to explain why it broke the "covenant" with the advisory planning commission and council.

Ald. Harold Olafson, who called the letter a "most innocuous piece of correspondence," said Gulf Oil obviously does not intend to be bothered with the matter.

Ald. Alf Hood said he was a member of the advisory planning commission when the agreement was worked out with Gulf Oil. He said the company promised to phase out its station at Scott and Hillside.

Decanter Theft

Victoria police were investigating Wednesday the shoplifting theft of a pewter decanter, about 10 inches high and worth about $40, from Lighthouse, 1005 Broad.

Roads and Drainage Suffer As Saanich Cuts Spending

Saanich's badly-needed road and drainage programs were virtually untouched as council this week pared the 1972 municipal budget to keep taxation increases down to a surprisingly low 1.86 mills.

For some property-owners, the net effect of the increase in the provincial home-owners grant and the small mill rate increase will be a decrease in taxation.

However, assessed values for tax purposes are up generally by 5 per cent.

During four nights of budget discussions, council removed projects worth about 3.5 mills from the 1972 spending estimates. The preliminary document from which they worked would have produced a taxation increase of 6.69 mills.

The general and debt mill rate increase over last year is 2.5 mills but this amount is reduced by lower school taxes, which are collected by municipalities on behalf of school boards.

"This (1.86 mills) is a surprisingly small increase and is very satisfactory to all of us," said Mayor Hugh Curtis Thursday. "It is much less than all of us guessed."

However, the best news in the 1972 budget is the fact that roads programs, which had to be accelerated because of severe frost damage last winter, and draining programs, the need for which was emphasized by last winter's flooding, were untouched.

The capital drainage program has been doubled to $286,000 this year and the road improvement program stands at $396,736. Sidewalks will get $50,000 woorth of capital improvements.

Here are some of the major road projects that will be executed this year:

Quadra between Rogers and Dieppe, $115,000; Gordon Head Road between McKenzie and Cedar Hill, $71,500; Gorge Road between Gorge View and Dysart $51,800; Hartland Road $26,500; Seymour in the vicintiy of the new Greater Victoria Library board branch office $16,500; Cul-duthel between Davidson and Douglas $27,000; Blair Ave. between Shelbourne and Larchwood $9,000; full length of Bethune $38,000; Obed from Harriet to Milgrove $30,000.

In addition, a parks maintenance program worth $202,000 was untouched.

While the mill rate increase is small, Saanich property-owners nevertheless will be faced with heavier sewer charges. The "per parcel tax" is going up about $30 to $44.30 and the per household sewer maintenance charge is increasing to $20.15 from last year's $13.30.

Chant To Step Down

Morrison Eyes Seat

Former Victoria car dealer Newell Morrison said Thursday night he will "actively seek" the Social Credit nomination to replace Public Works Minister William Chant as a candidate in the next provincial election.

Morrison, 47, of 2175 Lansdowne, Oak Bay, owned what is now the Cornell Chevrolet Oldsmobile dealership at 3050 Douglas until 1969 when he sold the General Motors franchise. He still owns the property and premises, retains a car lease business and runs a travel agency.

"I haven't been asked by anyone to do this," Morrison said, and I haven't any idea if or when a nominating convention will be held. But I feel I would like to contribute something to the community and this is my way of doing it."

Morrison is a member of the Oak Bay Social Credit association, but said he has no official backing at this point from the Social Credit party.

Morrison was born in China, but moved with his family to Regina when he was very young. During the Second World War, he served as a pilot on active service with the RCAF.

After earning a Bachelor of Commerce degree from the University of British Columbia, he came to Victoria in 1949.

He moved to Duncan for four years where he was in the auto sales business and returned to Victoria in 1956.

Doctor Claims Interference By Region Hospital Board

By JOHN MATTERS
Colonist Reporter

The Capital Region's hospital board is trying to intervene in doctors' hospital privileges, the president of the Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society said Thursday night.

Dr. A. J. Wood made the comment during an interview after the board, which manages Queen Victoria General Hospital, heard the conditions on which regional board will participate in the cost of a $40,000 laser for eye surgery.

Regional board gave approval in principle to the purchase provided the equipment would be used by "all certified ophthalmologists."

Wood said this means regional board is moving into an area that is the responsibility of hospital boards if it is specifying which doctors may or may not practise in a hospital.

Wood said hospital boards are legally responsible for the privileges they assign doctors and just because a doctor is certified in a specialty it does not mean that he can walk into any hospital of his choice and use any equipment he wants.

Queen Victoria General also has had B.C. Hospital Insurance Service approval for the argon laser.

However, it was learned Thursday the hospital almost did not get endorsement at the local level because some physicians made a strong case to have the device placed at Veterans' Hospital, where they said it would complement a ruby laser already in use there.

During an earlier meeting of the hospital's board of management, Dr. J. L. Heffernan, president of medical staff, explained the urgency of enlarging the present, four-bed intensive-care unit.

He and Wood were given permission by the board to consult Health Minister Ralph Loffmarak on the project, which would cost about $100,000.

Heffernan said that in addition to capital costs, the government will be asked to approve the additional day-to-day operating costs of an expanded unit.

Heffernan explained that the intensive-care unit, where the most seriouly ill are cared for, is always fully occupied and often persons who qualify for that level of care have to be placed elsewhere in the hospital.

Political Leader in Offing?

Papua-New Guinea has a population of 2.5 milion in a land area half the size of British Columbia, but the territory will acquire what is believed to be its first Master of Arts when Rabbie Namaliu gets his postgraduate degree from University of Victoria next month.

"There are three of us students from Port Morseby University doing graduate work," said Namaliu, "for in addition to myself, there are students at the University of Guelph and at the University of Hawaii, but I think I will be the first to get a postgraduate degree."

The student from New Guinea has strong nationalistic feelings although he is sympathetic to the UN mandate given to Australia to rule the country.

"We have some serious problems," said Namaliu, who has been carrying out postgraduate studies in history and political science here, "but there is no doubt in my mind we are moving towards self-government and educating our own native population is going to be one of the biggest factors in gaining our independence."

One of the major problems in Papua-New Guinea is that of communication for there are 700 different languages spoken on the island. Namaliu said that two of he languages Kuanua and Talai, are the commonest, and also pidgin — an amalgam of English, Dutch, German and Chinese.

He said he is particularly proud of the fact that last week his country's House of Assembly of 100 members met, with all members elected by a universal franchise, as opposed to the old system which saw controlling positions occupied by Australian government Nominees.

Namaliu said there are two deep undercurrents in his country's move to nationalism.

One is a profound resentment of the Chinese, who dominate most of small business and commerce as they do i neighboring Indonesia. The Papua-New Guinea people want to encourage foreign investment in such industries as copra, coffee, cocoa, tea and forest products. They also want a greater share of control.

There is also a profound resentment against segregated housing and schooling and they would like to see the Australian administration loosen some control.

Namaliu said the Australians are hypocritical because they maintain a white Australia policy, "but so far have come up with no plan to grant us our independence."

"I have no concrete evidence to support this, but I believe the Australians turned down an offer of help from the Peace Corps in case any blacks were sent to New Guinea."

He conceded that there is a great amount of illiteracy in both children and adults, but blamed this on the lack of initiative on the part of the administration, saying, "We got our first high school in 1960, and our first university in 1962.

"There is also a sad fact that it wasn't until 1968 that we produced our first law graduate and now we have six. But there are still no native judges in our courts."

Papua-New Guinea is an administrative union of the United Nations Australian Trust Territory of New Guinea and the Territory of Papua.

Drugs Turn Him Off

A one-time drug runner and ex-convict from the U.S. and Mexico will tell how he kicked the drug scene when he talks to a public meeting in Oak Bay junior high school at 8 p.m. today.

The man, Tino Carrasco, is in Victoria under the sponsorship of the Wayout Gate Youth Centre, which was opened last October at 1318 Broad by the Seventh-day Adventist Church.

Mrs. Kathleen Piper, director of the centre, has worked with Carrasco in California.

"He has devoted himself to a special field of work with prisoners," Mrs. Piper said, "and is well-known to the underworld and to prisoners alike. His personal work among prisoners reveals that he has spent years of self-supporting unselfish work for their transformation and for prison reform."

Mrs. Piper said Carrasco now is "turned on with Christ" and is helping young people who are having problems with drugs.

The Wayout program deals not only with drugs, but with other problems of young people, from sex to war.

The program currently is being advertised on radio in Victoria by Johnny Cash. Wayout has sent its booklets and magazines to 350,000 young people in Canada and the U.S.

These materials will be on display at Oak Bay junior high tonight. A concert of gospel music will precede Carrasco's talk. There will be a silver collection.

Harvard Seniors Studied

Grades Didn't Suffer

CHICAGO (AP) — A group of investigators have reported finding little difference in grades and participation in athletics and student activities between college seniors who experimented with drugs and those who did not.

The researchers, from Harvard University, reported in Archives of General Psychiatry. The archives is a specialty publication of the American Medical Association.

The authors distributed questionnaries to a representative group of 57 Harvard seniors. They found that:

- Sixty-nine per cent of the seniors said they had used an illegal drug at least once. Even allowing for sampling error and distortion in replies, the non-users clearly were in the minority.
- Two-thirds said they had tried marijuana only; one-fourth reported experimentation with hallucinogens, amphetamines and occasionally opiates and cocaine.
- More than half of all users had tried drugs more than 10 times; fewer than one-tenth reported only a single experience.
- The only drug which correlated consistently with lower grades was alcohol.
- Grades did not change significantly following the beginning of marijuana use.
- There was no essential difference in college activities between users and non-users.
- Significantly more users had less definite career plans than non-users.

The only real differences between users and non-users were found in the students' personal lives:

- Visits to a psychiatrist. There was a strong correlation between drug use and visits to a psychiatrist. Since half the users saw a psychiatrist before they became users, this statistic suggested that users suffered from problems not directly related to drug use.
- The degree to which students saw themselves as "alienated from American society."
- Sexual activity. This was the most marked distinguishing characteristic of drug users. Among both men and women, fewer than half of the non-users reported having had intercourse; the intermediate users averaged 80 per cent, and the most involved user groups nearly 100 per cent.

Researchers concluded that drug use had little influence on the significant differences between users and non-users. They felt that these differences characterized the drug user before he even inhaled his first puff or swallowed his first tablet.

"It is not the drug that determines the use," they said, "but the personality of the user that determines the drug, and the use to which he puts it."

Women Drivers' Reputation —Maybe So, Maybe No

LONDON (UPI) — A British research team says it is possible — only — that women may be worse drivers than men.

That is as far as the government's transport and road research laboratory would go this week.

Reporting on a seven-month study of road accident investigation near the laboratory's headquarters at Crowthorne, the investigators said there was no evidence to indicate women were more likely to be involved in an accident in the first place.

The study simply found that women drivers more often than men were found to be responsible for the accidents in which they were involved, according to a laboratory spokesman.

"It is valid to say that women were worse than men. But we could not generalize to say that they always are," the spokesman said.

The report also said drivers under 20 or over 60 were most often responsible for the accidents in which they were involved.

Theatre Will Go On Road

That's where what's at?

About 32 students ranging in age from 14 to 17 are hard at work every night readying a play That's Where It's At, Baby, to go on the road. They expect to go to schools up Island, in Vancouver, Sooke, Victoria and Salt Spring as well as their own school district.

They were working under English and theatre teacher Doug Bambrough, newly arrived in the district from Campbell River.

That production ran from Dec. 13 to Jan. 5, leaving the school population so impressed that when Bambrough decided to launch another production 116 students showed up for auditions.

This was despite the fact that all rehearsals — and there is a rehearsal just about every day — are held on the students' time.

And it's not as if the rehearsals are easy.

—Colonist photos by Ian McKain

The play under rehearsal at present deals with the efforts of a girl who goes to Vancouver's Gastown to try to trace her brother.

The original 116 hopeful actors and stage directors have been whittled down to 38 who turn out for rehearsals and keep track of stage directions.

Although the project started as part of the Grade 9 drama course, it has expanded far beyond that.

"There is no grading for this; although we are part of the school this is really just an extra," Bambrough says.

When the company goes on tour, four teachers and parcels of school books will go along.

"They'll perform in the afternoon, and study in the evening," said Bambrough. "It's not going to be a little rest cure at all."

One of the actors dropped out of school last year but returned this year partly because he was attracted by the theatre program.

"I think this kind of thing turns kids on to school, and after a while they take more interest in academics as well," said Bambrough.

Apollo Sparks

Moon Madness

By STEVE HARVEY
Colonist—Los Angeles Times Service

When a bright light appeared above the moon earlier this week, phone lines across the United States were soon jammed.

Some callers believed that the light — which was actually the planet Venus — was the Apollo 16 spacecraft. But others had darker visions.

"We've gotten calls from people saying they see antennas on it (the light)," said a spokesman for the North American Air Defence command in Colorado Springs, Colo.

In Arizona, several persons expressed fear that the moon was breaking up — and possibly heading for this planet.

The notion that the moon may pose a threat for earthlings — even those who don't walk on it — has persisted since ancient times.

Long ago, it was commony believed that a night's sleep in the moonlight could cause insanity. Thus, the word lunacy, derived from luna (Latin for moon).

The Greek physician Galen blamed the moon for epilepsy. Plutach linked mutations with the moon, which, he said, has "a special hand in the birth of children."

In ancient Mexico, irrational acts of violence were often attributed to the moon — "She it is who sends dreams wherein gods and devils have their sport with men."

In a more recent work, Norman Mailer's An American Dream, the protagonist becomes a war hero by killing four German soldiers — under a full moon.

Haunted by the memory, he later murders his wife. He constantly feels the presence of the moon: "A silvery whale, it slipped up from the clouds and was clear, coming to surface in a midnight sea, and I felt its pale call, princess of the dead, I would never be free . . ."

In his nonfictional account of Apollo 11 — Of a Fire on the Moon, — Mailer recalls seeing a "look of pain" after asking Robert Gilruth, then director of the Manned Spacecraft Centre in Houston:

'Are you ever worried . . . that landing on the moon may result in all sorts of psychic disturbances for us here on earth?"

As the scientist "stammered into silence, there was the breath of dread in the room . . . yes, he had looked at some figures on the subject, and there seemed to be a higher incidence of hospital commission reports of admission to mental institutions during the full moon."

Psychologists, however, hesitate to link the moon with abnormal behavior.

"There are too many factors involved to prove a direct correlation," says Dr. Edward Stainbrook, professor of clinical psychology at the University of Southern California. "Of course, it is true that man's body may be programmed to certain cycles of nature."

A recent radio report in Chicago quoted the city's police department as saying more crime is committed when the moon is full. The department, however, replied that it had said no such thing.

But one area where the link between the moon and crime is clear is the Hollywood backlot, home of the titled tormentor, Count Dracula, and his workingclass counterpart, the Wolf Man.

Dracula also bites necks in the moonlight, resting in his casket when the sun is out.

He meets his downfall, however, in a story written by Woody Allen when he mistakenly arises during a total eclipse and visits a neighbor's home.

Discovering his miscalculation, the count seeks refuge in a closet. But the door is opened after the sun reappears and he quickly dissolves into dust. "Does this mean dinner's off tonight?" his host asks.

Coeds Tried Rape

CHICAGO (UPI) — A University of Illinois student said this week that although he has been called a "male chauvinist pig," he has filed only simple battery charges against three aggressive coeds who tore open his shirt, pulled down his pants and threatened to rape him.

William Chester, 34, said the three girls attacked him Tuesday afternoon on the sixth floor of the university's student centre in Chicago.

Two university employees who said they interrupted the incident confirmed Chester's story.

"They (the coeds) took offense at my satirical article about women's lib organizations," Chester said, referring to his story which appeared in the April Fool edition of the Chicago Ollini, an off-campus "underground" publication.

Chester said he received a note Tuesday when he arrived at the newspaper's office. "Come and see us, we are going to rape you," he quoted the note as saying. It was signed by "three women's libbers."

"They suggested we go out in the hallway to talk about the article," he said. "Then they suggested we go up to the sixth floor."

Smiling bravely, as he recalls, Chester went up the stairs with the girls.

"When we got there, one of the girls — a husky 200-pounder — put a bear hug on me from behind. The other two pushed me and the big one held me while lying under me," Chester said in a report to university authorities.

One of the girls tore open his shirt and another pulled down his pants, "but in the next couple of minutes" two university employees came down the corridor, and the girls fled, Chester said.

Fee Proposal Unanswered

Wait for Bennett

The B.C. Medical Association was waiting Thursday for Premier W. A. C. Bennett to make a complete review of the physicians' latest proposal for an increase in their fee schedule.

Sources in BCMA said statements made by the premier in Vancouver Wednesday night, when he stepped off an aircraft after a trip to the United States, indicated he has not had an opportunity to peruse all the data.

At that time, the premier said a 6.5 per cent increase in the average individual earnings of doctors would be acceptable but if it were "a 6.5 per cent increase in the rate structure that would be a different thing."

Medical observers said it was no surprise that Bennett would accept a 6.5 per cent increase in the "global" costs of medicare — he offered the doctors an increase of 10 per cent last September.

The government's offer was that the total cost of physicians' services — this would include increases arising from additional doctors, new procedures and heavier patient demand — should not inflate at a rate greater than 10 per cent.

Any increase in the doctors' fee schedule, that is the remuneration for individual services, would be contingent on their ability to control the other factors that add to medical costs.

But members of the BCMA early in January overwhelmingly rejected the "global" approach to reimbursement.

Doctors and provincial secretary Wesley Black met last week to consider a revised medical care fee schedule presented by the doctors, cutting increases in their schedule by about 2 per cent to roughly 6.5 per cent.

Black promised to discuss the revised schedule with the B.C. Medical Services Commission and the B.C. Treasury Board, which is headed by Premier Bennett.

As Bennett made his announcement, spokesmen for the B.C. Medical Association were discounting reports that the revisions doctors made might cause a defection from the association by some specialty groups.

Dr. E. C. McCoy, BCMA executive director, and president Dr. Walter Anderson confirmed there has been grumbling from some of the specialty groups, but said no formal notice of defections has been handed to the board of directors.

Plastic surgeons, ophthalmologists, ear, nose and throat specialists were all affected in the BCMA's revision of fee schedules, and McCoy said there had been rumors they might opt out of the association.

"But these are just rumors — individuals threatening perhaps in the heat of anger over income cuts, to desert the association," he said. "Whenever there is any type of conflict within the BCMA there are always a few who speak out heatedly. But in the end a favorable agreement is reached."

Doctors have been billing the government medical care scheme on the basis of the 1972 fee schedule the doctors wanted.

The government has refused to pay anything beyond the 1971 schedule, and Premier Bennett said he would advise patients to refuse to pay any doctors who might attempt an "extra billing" of their patients to try to make up the difference.

"People should only pay whatever is allowed by the medical commission," he said.

He said that if the extra billing practice develops anyway, doctors would be required to bill either the government or their patients, but not both.

"The patient has the right of choice — this is a free country — we'll have no compulsion there," he said.

New Loading Zone For Trucks Alone

Street parking zones in Victoria currently designated "commercial loading zones" will be renamed "truck loading zones" beginning Monday, city traffic engineer David Campbell reported Thursday.

Campbell said truck loading zones will be restricted to trucks only. No longer will cars or station wagons be allowed to use such zones even if they have municipal licence plates.

"This change in the regulations has been made necessary because of the increased merchandise deliveries taking place in downtown Victoria by trucks and the difficulty that the bonafide commercial carriers are experiencing in finding adequate curb space for loading and unloading," Campbell said.

Campbell said use of general loading zones by any type of vehicle will remain allowed.

Curtis Critical

Welfa Reduc

Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich has asked the provincial government to reduce the municipality's share of social assistance costs from the current 15 per cent to 10 per cent.

He made the request in a letter to Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi that also wondered whether welfare costs were a proper charge against property owners in the first place.

The mayor stated that welfare costs in Saanich exceed the individual items of fire protection, police protection and public works.

"It would seem strange that a municipality should be expected to pay more for its share of social assistance than it does for any one of the three services I have mentioned," added Curtis.

In 1967, Saanich's share of the per capita cost for social assistance was $217,000, which at that time was based on a 10 per cent contribution.

Renaiss To Fill

By ERITH SMITH
Colonist Reporter

The gentle sounds of Renaissance music will be heard in the McLaurin Building, University of Victoria, in August when there will be an early music workshop with classes for recorder, lute and viol.

The study of this music, and the playing of these instruments of a long-ago period, are enjoying a revival.

Dr. Christine Mather, UVic director of this summer's workshop, could be called an expert in the field.

Native of Scotland, she was for some years assistant professor of music at the University of Manitoba in Winnipeg. There, in 1963, she founded the Manitoba Consort, a group of seven musicians who performed only this music of the Renaissance period.

Two other members of that consort will be on the workshop staff this summer: Paul Palmer, solo recorder, and Peggie Sampson, solo viol.

Other instructors will be Richard Burleson on the lute; Shirley Marcus, recorder, and Peggy Palmer who will conduct a special workshop on the harpsichord (but there will be no classes for this instrument).

Classes for lute, recorder and viol will be at all levels, for beginner, intermediate and advanced students, and applications are already being received from throughout B.C. and from the Seattle area.

The lute is akin to the guitar. In fact, Dr. Mather said any guitarists interested in lute-playing are invited to look into the workshop possibilities. Since lutes are rare, the guitars can be tuned and played lute-style.

Viols are even scarcer. A cousin of the viola but played like a cello, this instrument almost literally vanished more than 300 years ago. Consequently no old ones are now available — unlike old violins which have continued in use.

Viols today are costly, and hard to come by — but Dr. Mather says the outlay and the wait are, for the enthusiast, well worth it.

The early music workshop runs Aug. 6 to 12, and is expected to attract about 50 participants of all ages and every range of ability. There will be two concerts — one Aug. 9 by Peggie Sampson, the other Aug. 11 by the workshop faculty.

There's an intriguing note

Welfare Charges Reduction Asked

Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich has asked the provincial government to reduce the municipality's share of social assistance costs from the current 15 per cent to 10 per cent.

He made the request in a letter to Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi that also wondered whether welfare costs were a proper charge against property owners in the first place.

The mayor stated that welfare costs in Saanich exceed the individual items of fire protection, police protection and public works.

"It would seem strange that a municipality should be expected to pay more for its share of social assistance than it does for any one of the three services I have mentioned," added Curtis.

In 1967, Saanich's share of the per capita cost for social assistance was $217,000, which at that time was based on a 10 per cent contribution.

Curtis
. . . type of juggling

On April 1, 1968, the contribution was arbitrarily increased to 20 per cent by the provincial government and the result that Saanich's share for that year was $510,000, or more than double the previous year's.

In 1970, this had risen to $896,990 and in 1971 it was $799,703. The 1972 budget forecasts a social assistance expenditure of $937,228.

"The present 'hit and miss' method of establishing the municipal share according to the whim of the government of the day should no longer hold," said Curtis. "We were previously paying 10 per cent. It was then doubled to 20 per cent and subsequently reduced to 15 per cent.

"I think you must recognize that this type of juggling of the local share of social assistance leaves municipal councils with the feeling that they do not know what is going to happen next."

Curtis and other mayors are writing to Gaglardi in response to the minister's request to let him know what ails the B.C. welfare system. The letters also are going to Premier Bennett and Ald. E. J. Broome of Vancouver, president of the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

There's an intriguing note in the brochure announcing the workshop:

"Players," it says, "of krummhorns, rackets, shawms, etc., are encouraged to bring them and join the renaissance band."

The names themselves are delightful, and so, says Dr. Mather are the instruments, familiarly known as "buzzies."

Krummhorns come in four sizes, ranging from about a foot to a yard in length, bent at the outer end into a wide hook. The four sizes represent soprano, alto, tenor and bass, and they are often played as quartet.

The racket is vaguely bottle-like in shape about a foot long. Also a reed instrument, it is like a compact, bundled-up bassoon.

Bennetts vs. Sun Libel Case

Headline Upsets Judge

VANCOUVER (CP) — A newspaper headline was criticized Thursday by the presiding judge in a libel action being tried in B.C. Supreme Court.

Justice Richard Anderson criticized a headline on a story in heThe Province, Vancouver's morning newspaper, reporting on evidence presented to the court Wednesday in the case in which William R. Bennett, his brother Russell and Bennett Stores Ltd. are suing for libel The Sun, Pacific Press Ltd., Sun Publisher Stuart Keate and Sun Managing Editor William Galt.

The Bennetts are the sons of Premier Bennett. They claim the libel occurred in the evening Sun of Feb. 17, 1971, which reported the proceedings of a committee of the B.C. legislature.

Anderson produced a copy of the Thursday edition of The Province and drew counsel's attenion to a headline across the top of the third section which read: "Report fair, libel hearing told." The story below included testimony presented to the court the previous day in which a witness described the Sun report as fair and accurate.

Now, I made it clear yesterday that it is not for a witness to decide if it is fair, but for me," said Anderson, who noted that The Province is part of Pacific Press.

Pacific Press is the owner of The Sun and The Province, which are published by separate companies.

Peter Butler, counsel for the four defendants, said he appreciated the judge's concern about the headline, "but I would also indicate that it is a question of fact and not law."

Anderson replied: "It is not for an MLA (the witness quoted in The Province) to say it is fair and accurate. I am to determine that.

"This paper goes on to say one of the Social Credit MLAs says a report is fair. What would the public think when they read that?"

Butler said he was not trying "to raise the judge's ire" and Anderson shot back, "It is already raised."

Butler continued to insist that fairness and accuracy are a question of fact and not law and that the witnesses quoted from Tuesday's court hearing were saying they were present at the meeting of Feb. 17 which gave rise to the disputed report in The Sun.

Anderson suggested to him that in questioning the witnesses Wednesday Butler had asked them, "Is it a fair and accurate report?"

Butler denied this, saying his question had been, "Can you tell us of the accuracy of that article and that the witness had replied, 'I think it was fair and accurate.' "

In a later exchange, Butler said that in asking the question again, the version attributed to him by the judge might have "slipped in by accident."

Butler produced a memo which he said had been given by Keate to Galt on his appointment as managing editor in May, 1968, outling Galt's duties and what the publisher required of him.

Anderson allowed it to be entered in evidence over the objections of Allan McEachern, counsel for the Bennetts, commenting:

"Keate is a defendant and, if the question of gross negligence came up, a question might be that Keate had done everything he could to prevent such negligence."

Galt, testifying about events the day the Sun published the allegedly libellous article, said Iain Hunter, who covered the meeting on which the article was based, was "a first-class reporter, well-educated and of good character."

Kleindienst Again Supported

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Senate judiciary committee reaffirmed its recommendation Thursday that the senate confirm Richard Kleindienst as attorney-general.

Chairman James Eastland said the vote was 11-4 with Senator John McClellan (D—Ark.) not voting.

The reaffirmation came two months after the committee originally recommended unanimously that Kleindienst be confirmed to succeed John Mitchell, who resigned to take command of President Nixon's re-election campaign.

During that time, the committee has conducted a wide-ranging investigation into Kleindienst's role in the settlement of a controversial anti-trust case against International Telephone and Telegraph Co.

Salmo Pollution Case Postponed

SALMO, B.C. (CP) — The trial of Canadian Explorations Co .Ltd., charged with polluting the north and south arms of the Salmo River from its tailing pond, has been adjourned to May 11, an RCMP spokesman said Thursday.

The trial was originally scheduled for April 27, but lawyers for both sides agreed to the postponement, the spokesman said.

The charge was laid March 3 by the RCMP following complaints by residents and an investigation by provincial fish and wildlife officials.

It's All Yours

As you probably know, it has become our custom to distribute free garden seeds every spring to our readers and their friends and neighbours, and for this week and next, our gift seeds are of Malope "Vulcan," an unusually lovely dark red flower virtually unknown in this country.

It is hard to understand why this plant has been so neglected by Canadian and U.S. seed companies, for European seedsmen hold the Malope in high regard, and especially the new tetraploid hybrid known as Vulcan. A good example of this regard is its listing in the fine seed catalogue of Thompson and Morgan Ltd. of Ipswich, England. This is what they have to say about it:

"MALOPE: An easy to grow and very beautiful annual from the Mediterranean Region. It has large, deep, rosy-purple flowers, each measuring about three inches in diameter, with erect branching stems two to three feet in height. A splendid plant for the border, with flowers which are produced in great profusion from June to September. Likes a light soil in a sunny, open position; seldom requires staking."

Now, Thompson and Morgan is a highly ethical, conservative British firm, and its unique catalogue, which lists well over 3,000 items, has become a sort of Bible for plantsmen and serious gardeners all over the world, for it is noted for its modest, factual descriptions of plants and flowers. These people are not in the habit of shooting off at the mouth, so when they use terms like "very beautiful" and "a splendid plant," this is very high praise indeed.

Malope trida grandiflora, pronounced "mallow-pee," is a member of the Mallow family, and the flower bears and family likeness to the great flower of thetropical Hibiscus. It is an old plant, well known to the ancient Romans, and in fact, one of the garden books says that Pliny himself gave it the name Malope, which means "soft" or "soothing," fom the texture of the leaf and its supposed healing properties.

, The specific name, trifida, means "Three-cleft" and refers to the shape of the leaves, while "grandiflora" indicates that the flowers are large.

It is always a good idea, when attempting to grow an unfamiliar plant, to find out where it came from originally, for a study of its native habitat will yield valuable clues as to its likes and dislikes. Thus, a desert plant should be given dryish, sandy soil and much sunshine, while a jungle flower will need shade, high humidity and a leafy soil. The Malope is a native of Southern Spain, a region of poorish, gravelly soil and bright sunshine.

I don't mean that the Malope INSISTS upon Mediterranean conditions. Lean, gritty soil and long hours of baking hot sunshine are preferences, not demands. These seeds will come up and grow, and the plants will bloom their heads off almost anywhere except in waterlogged soil or in deep shade.

I am most anxious to share my discovery of Malope with all my regular readers, and all my readers' friends, neighbors and relatives, so please pass the word around. To get a free packet of these uncommon seeds, just write me a note asking for them, enclosing a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

Not So Elementary

Though I've seen nothing of it in our magazines, which seem bogged down in the pursuit of what Dr. Watson would have called ineffable twaddle, I've just received from London a rather persuasive paper on the true authorship of the Sherlock Holmes adventures.

It is written by the Marquis of Donegall and is published in the winter issue of the journal of the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, of which Lord Donegall is honorary editor. Thus it is not to be taken lightly.

The journal comes to me through a gracious gesture of my English friend Irene Garnet-Viggers, of London, whose daughter my family some years ago befriended when she was alone over here.

Although Mrs. Garnet-Viggers is only in civil service, and I should imagine neither well-off nor privy to the higher circles of influence, she managed to get me a membership in the Sherlock Holmes Society of London, and I have consequently been corresponding with that distinguished body ever since.

At first I assumed the society must be rather large, if Mrs. Garnet-Viggers could get me in, but the current journal contains a list of members and I find that we are indeed an elite group, our names running to less than 10 columns of 14-point type.

Heading the list, of course, is Lord Gore-Booth, GCMG, KCVO, the former British high commissioner in India, and our president.

The members are listed alphabetically, the first being G. F. Abercrombie, VRD, MA, MD, followed by Mrs. M. Abercrombie, whom I presume to be Abercrombie's spouse.

In view of Sherlock Holmes' lofty chauvinism toward women, I should have thought the society would be sexist, but this misapprehension is happily dispelled by the inclusion of Mrs. Abercrombie as well as Air Cdt. Dame Jean Bromet, DB, Mrs. P. Wynne-Jones, BA, MRAD, Miss V. Spencer-Hess, and a good many other ladies.

It hadn't crossed my mind that my own name would appear in such formidable company, and I was quite surprised, and not a little gratified, when it popped up just between Smith, F. W., MSIA, and Smyth, L.H., BA, LLB. Suddenly there I was: Smith, J.

I had never before felt such a sense of fellowship and identity. I plunged into the journal with that special intensity that comes of belonging, and soon found myself entranced by the logic and insight of Lord Donegall's paper on the authorship.

He grants that his paper is indeed brief to deal with "one of the greatest problems of English literature," pointing out that it was only after years of research that the Shakespearean scholars J. M. Robertson, and later, A. L. Rowse, both came to the useful conclusion that, if it was not William Shakespeare who wrote the works of Shakespeare, then it was very likely another person of the same name.

I won't disclose the bones of Lord Donegall's argument. For all I know we may be under some bond to keep these matters esoteric.

But I will say that he moves me, for one, to the conviction that the Holmes adventures were written by Dr. John H. Watson, late of the Army Medical Department, on his return, wounded, from the Second Afghan War, and that Sir Arthur Conan Doyle was merely Watson's literary agent. (This theory, by the way, was first advanced in 1912 by Ronald Knox, later Monsignor Knox.)

The latest post also included an invitation to be in England for a "friendly competition" between members of the London society and its North American counterparts on our respective knowledge of Dr. Watson's works.

The contest is to take place on the late afternoon of Sunday, July 16, in Birmingham, Warwickshire, and is to be televised by BBC. We are to journey to Birmingham from London by train.

I plan to devote the remainder of my spring and the early summer to a study of the entire canon, beginning, of course, with A Scandal in Bohemia.

HOLLYWOOD — You can't imagine Dean Martin up in Abiquiu, N.M., elevation 10,000 feet, land of eagles with nosebleeds. He's up there shooting Showdown with Rock Hudson. But Dean despite his swinging image, adjusts himself to any location. So far the only off-work amusement the cast and crew have is watching Dean hit golf balls. Only sounds at night are those of amorous rattlesnakes shedding their skins and oversexed lizards making love to small iguanas. There's no one around for miles, even the Indians have deserted the area. Dean is consoled in the wilderness by Cathy Hawn, a good girl to go camping with.

One thing about Hugh Hefner's relationship with Barbi Benton, it's healthy. Hugh long has been known as favoring indoor sports, but Barbi has gotten Hefner out into the fresh air and sun. "You'd be amazed at how much milk he drinks," says Barbi, who has a kind of open freshness and honesty about her that makes her look younger than her 22 years. Her well-publicized romance with the multi-millionaire founder of the Playboy empire has had little effect on her. Else how can you explain her as a regular on Hee Haw? "It's fun to work in downtown Nashville," says Barbi. And this from the girl who lives in Hefner's $1.2 million mansion in Holmby Hills. That house is so big that when it's six p.m. in the living room, it's four o'clock in the kitchen.

★ ★ ★

Couple of letters from Trini Lopez who is starring in a movie down in Chile. The picture is Antonio and is being directed by Claudio Guzman. Trini says he is having a romance with his leading lady, Neomi Guerrero, who is only 18. She's called the Elizabeth Taylor of Chile, but Trini says she is not interested in coming to Hollywood. "She comes from a wealthy family and is only doing the movie for a lark," writes Trini, who adds, "Finally found a good restaurant in Santiago. And wouldn't you know it's Japanese?"

Thinks Aloud

Most people who label themselves "social" drinkers are really "sociable" drinkers, which is a far different thing; social drinking is confined to social functions alone, and then only minimally; sociable drinking has no self-imposed limits and is whatever you want to call it.

Apart from education, the one thing for which the public is willing to pay the greatest amount for the least return is keeping a man in prison just long enough to ruin him for anything but a return to the way of life that put him there in the first place.

With all the government attacks on the media these days, it is worth remembering Thomas Jefferson's statement that, "Were it left to me to decide whether we should have a government without newspapers, or newspapers without a government, I shrould not hesitate a moment to prefer the latter."

It is impossible to please someone who is unable or unwilling to please himself.

"Maleness" and "masculinity" are not interchangeable terms: maleness is biological and the same all over the world; masculinity is conventional and determined by what any given society conceives as "appropriate" masculine behavior. (It is not "masculine," for instance, to be a ballet dancer in the U.S., but intensely so in Russia.)

★ ★ ★

We would not think much of a doctor who still practised the medicine of 1800, yet most communicants expect their clergymen to preach a theology of that time or before; but if theology is a science, as it calls itself, it must discover new applications and interpretations of old truths, and cannot justify itself by reciting ancient dogmas any more than today's doctors can rely on leeches.

★ ★ ★

If some adult were to say to us, "I don't know if I can play the piano or compose music, because I've never tried," we would think him mad; yet people say, "I think I might be a writer, but I've never tried," and we accept that as a rational statement.

Saturday's AbouTV says, in a detailed rundown of programs set for next season, Lily Tomlin is not likely to be back on Laugh-In. But it wasn't until after AbouTV press time that I learned why.

She has sued Rowan, Martin and the other owners for breach of contract and has asked the courts to cancel that contract. Miss Tomlin says Laugh-In's internal problems so demoralized and embarrassed her that her unique comedy talents were thwarted and her performances became routine and repetitious. I'd say that means she won't be back.

And speaking of TV madness, NBC plans a Saturday morning cartoon series for children next fall called The Barkleys, about a family of dogs whose father is opinionated about everything. To make the Archie Bunker parallel even more obvious, father will be known as Arnie Barkley.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

World Champions

by IRA G. CORN JR.
TEAM CAPTAIN

Today's hands were played in one of the qualifying rounds of the Las Vegas Hilton $30,000 Invitational Knockout Tournament by the Italian Blue Team against a lineup headed by Bud Reinhold of Chicago.

Match your actions with those of the players.

Question No. 1: You are South, no vulnerability, and hold:

♥7
♦AQ732
♣AK2

What do you bid after:

South	West	North	East
1♦	Pass	1♠	Pass
3♣	Pass	4♣	Pass

Answer: A Blackwood call reveals no aces and no score. Four spades is the winner as it gives partner a chance to stop. The entire hand:

♣AK2

In the match Ira Rubin of Paramus, N.J. (South), and Bill Eisenberg (the former Ace now residing in Los Angeles) managed to stop at game and made that contract easily. At the other table Pietro Forquet and Benito Garozzo pushed on to slam and went down one. The Reinhold team gained 470 points which were good for 10 international match points (IMPs).

Question No. 2: You are South, all vulnerable, and hold:

♣J53

What do you bid after:

East	South	West	North
3♥	Pass	4♥	Double
Pass	?

Answer: Pass and the opponents score 10 tricks and 690 points. A five-diamond bid goes down two tricks for a profitable sacrifice. (The club ace was not led.) The entire hand:

In the match Eisenberg and Rubin achieved another par result by playing in five diamonds doubled, down 500. In the other room the Italians allowed Manny Hochfeld of Chicago and Eddie Kantar to play an unmolested heart game. The Reinhold team picked up another swing of 120 points good for three IMPs.

Nanaimo, Chemainus Laud Split

CHEMAINUS — Residents of Chemainus appear to be in favor of the amalgamation of the south half of the Ladysmith school district with Cowichan school district.

Mrs. Jean Fyffe, municipal council representative for the Chemainus Ratepayers' Association, said Thursday she felt merging was the answer that had to come.

"Economically and educationally I don't think it's a bad thing. It was getting too expensive for us to operate two high schools. Cowichan high school is quite good and can offer a greater opportunity for our commercial and vocational students.

"We couldn't offer as good a selection of courses at Chemainus and our occupational students were getting nothing," Mrs. Fyffe said.

Mrs. A. W. Roberts, a Chemainus housewife with three school-age children, said she did not like the idea of her children travelling a greater distance to school.

"My children seem to think the whole thing is great, so if they do, I suppose it must be better for them," she added.

Newly elected school trustee Esme Cossey from Chemainus said, "I think it's something that has been coming for a while. I see nothing wrong with it. In terms of the benefits for the students it is good.

"Eventually all senior high school students will go to Duncan where there is a greater variety of courses. Concerning the transportation problem, buses will be run and the distance from Chemainus to Duncan is not that great."

NANAIMO — Amalgamation of part of the Ladysmith school district will add about 1,300 students to Nanaimo district and will raise the total student population to nearly 13,000.

Chairman of Nanaimo school board, Mrs. Margaret Fuller, said Thursday that virtually all of those students would continue to attend classes in the same schools as at present with the only difference being those schools would come under the jurisdiction of Nanaimo school board.

Mrs. Fuller was commenting on the planned abolition of the Ladysmith school district. The move was approved earlier this week by the Ladysmith board. It was announced at that time that trustees had accepted an education department recommendation that the district be split with the northern part going to Nanaimo and the southern portion merging with the Cowichan school district.

"It's a little difficult to say anything about it at this time since we have had no communication from either the Ladysmith school board or the education department on the subject," she said.

However, Mrs. Fuller said her board would lend complete support and all possible co-operation to the move, "providing it does not result in any form of financial hardship on the taxpayers in this district."

The board chairman said she understands there are equalizing factors built in to the government grant structure which would prevent added financial burdens from falling on the shoulders of the board in the district receiving the new territory.

"Another thing we will have to guard against is that any educational advantages we have over some of the smaller districts are maintained."

She admits there will be considerable red tape involved in the merger but feels that it can be sorted out before the effective date of the merger, Sept. 1.

And she said she expects a series of meetings will be called involving Nanaimo and Ladysmith trustees and the education department for the purpose of settling details.

Such items as student transportation, budget takeover, the disposition of Ladysmith district office staff, elections and existing contracts with Ladysmith teachers are expected to be discussed.

The split in the Ladysmith district will bring about 53 per cent of that district under Nanaimo jurisdiction with the balance going to Cowichan.

"It should work out well for all concerned. We are looking forward to the advantages such as bulk purchasing for a larger district and other administrative advantages," Mrs. Fuller said.

B.C. Turbines Work Begun

MOSCOW (CP) — Engineers at the Leningrad Metal Works have begun designing turbines for a British Columbia hydroelectric project, Tass news agency reported Wednesday.

The Leningrad works won the contract to manufacture two 440,000-kilowatt hydraulic turbines in international bidding.

Cuban Stowaway

NANAIMO — A Cuban girl stowaway is not single as first thought and is now trying to go to Greece to join her sailor husband.

In a further development Thursday in the case of Lydia Del Rio Turino, 20, parliamentary secretary to Immigration Minister Bryce Mackasey, Ray Perrault of Vancouver, said he will make a personal report to the minister about the Cuban refugee.

Speaking to newsmen at a school career exposition, Perrault said he would be making inquiries into the case while he is in Nanaimo and his report will be made when he returns to Ottawa next week.

The girl arrived in Nanaimo three months ago aboard the Greek freighter Dorine Patalios and was allowed to stay in Canada after Mackasey issued a special permit.

However, Thursday it was learned that the Cuban girl is married to a Greek sailor, Ioannis Skovalos. The steps to have the woman to go to Greece are said to have been initiated by him.

An official of the immigration department in Nanaimo, Harold Miller, said Mrs. Skovalos made a voluntary declaration of marital status recently. It had been believed originally that the woman was single and had lived with her parents in Cuba.

She stowed away on the freighter while the vessel was docked in Havana and was taken off the ship when it arrived at Nanaimo in late January. It is believed her husband was serving aboard the ship at that time.

Disposition of the application to leave Canada will be decided by immigration officials in Ottawa and will hinge on the issuance of an identity permit by the minister.

Perrault said he hopes to talk to the woman today. The outcome of that interview, he added, will form the basis of his report to Mackasey.

Forest Talks

VANCOUVER (CP) — Meetings will continue today between the coast negotiating committee of the International Woodworkers of America and top officials of the B.C. forest industry.

Jack Moore, regional president of the union, said the committee met Thursday with employer representatives headed by Robert Bonner, chief executive officer of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., to attempt to resolve a dispute involving fallers.

Fallers returned to work earlier this week at Franklin River and Kennedy Lake and Wednesday four forest firms won injunctions in B.C. Supreme Court that ruled their walkouts unlawful.

Injunctions were granted to Canadian Forest Products at Englewood, Weldwood of Canada Ltd. at Squamish, Crown Zellerbach at Courtenay and B.C. Forest Products at Pitt Lake.

Premier Praises U.S. Wage Freeze

Canada Needs Curbs

Premier Bennett returned Wednesday from a 12-day visit to the United States, more convinced than ever that U.S.-style wage, price and interest controls should be imposed in Canada.

He said in an interview that one of his main reasons for going to the U.S. was to see what benefits have resulted from the wage and price controls in that country, imposed last August by President Nixon.

"The benefits are way greater than what we have been led to believe by press reports," Bennett said.

Canada, as an exporting country must impose wage, price and interest controls when such controls are in effect south of the border, said the Social Credit leader.

"I think we should have these controls here in Canada at this time."

The premier sent a telegram to federal Finance Minister John Turner April 7 calling for immediate imposition of wage, price and interest controls by Ottawa to fight inflation.

But Wednesday he added that he would be satisfied if the federal government would impose the controls for one year only, with the understanding that it would review the need for continuation of the controls each year.

Bennett reported that he met with financial agencies in New York with large investments in British Columbia and with the world's two leading financial rating agencies — Moody's, and Standard and Poor.

Bennett said he is looking forward now to the tour of B.C. which he and his cabinet will make in late May and early June, calling it another "look-see" tour.

He said B.C., like the federal government, has a "double A" rating — the highest awarded outside the U.S., but added he isn't satisfied with even this: "We've applied for 'triple A'."

The premier said he was successful in increasing investment in B.C. from south of the border, but refused to give details other than that it will be "in broad fields."

Moran Dam Out Says Bennett

Premier Bennett says the proposed Moran Dam won't be built on the Fraser River as long as he heads the government and he can't understand why two of his cabinet ministers keep talking about it.

In a Vancouver interview Wednesday after returning from a 12-day visit to the U.S. Bennett was asked about statements made by Resources Minister Ray Williston and Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan, who said the government may be forced to build the dam to ease downstream Fraser River flooding.

"As long as I'm premier, we are not going to build it, that's a cinch," said the Social Credit leader.

Bennett said he sticks by his earlier commitments on the dam, proposed for construction near Lillooet — that it won't be built because it would hurt the Fraser River salmon fishery.

Then why do his ministers keep talking about the Moran Dam?

"I don't know. They have a right to free speech."

Meanwhile, in Edmonton, well-known Campbell River conservationist Roderick Haig Brown said the dam would mean total destruction of the salmon fishery above the dam and 50 per cent loss below it.

"It is a totally-immoral proposal," said Haig-Brown in an address to a B'nai B'rith Dinner Wednesday night.

Restoration of sockeye salmon to the Fraser River was a "success story in resource management almost without parallel on the North American continent."

If the $1 billion dam were built for flood-control purposes, "a significant part of Canada would die with the dam."

Unity Name

Church Of Canada Chosen

TORONTO (CP) — Church of Canada was chosen Thursday by the general commission on church union as the name for the new church that will replace the United Church of Canada, the Anglican Church of Canada and the Christian Church Disciples of Christ if organic union is approved.

Selection of a name was among many contentious issues facing the churches in recent years as they moved slowly toward union of Canada's five million Protestants.

Union of the three denominations will become official only when the plan of union finally is approved. This cannot come before 1974.

The draft of a plan of union, adopted by the general commission at its meeting here in November, 1970, now is before church members. It still has to be presented with amendments to the general council of the United Church and the general synod of the Anglican Church at their biennial meetings later this year.

The United Church has more than two million members and adherents and the Anglican Church 1.8 million communicants. The Christian Church has about 6,000 members scattered throughout the Maritimes, southern Ontario and the Prairie provinces.

The Presbyterian Church in Canada, a portion of which held back in 1925 when the United Church was formed, and the Baptist Church of Protestant denominations in Canada are the other large Canada. Both churches have said they will not participate in church union, under discussion for a quarter-century.

There is strong minority opposition in both the United Church and the Anglican Church to union. Both churches now have a common hymn book, adopted in 1971, and there are many other points of similarity in their services.

The United and Christian churches took a long stride toward union in 1971 when they agreed to appoint bishops, and the Anglicans, in turn, agreed to a form of church administration headed by a president.

Nationwide Crackdown In Italy

ROME (UPI) — Police staged a new nationwide crime-busting operation Thursday, checking tens of thousands of persons and arresting hundreds 10 days before a parliamentary election in which law and order is a key issue.

Incomplete reports coming in from nine cities said more than 5,000 police set up roadblocks, searched bars and homes of suspects and arrested 403 persons caught committing crimes or wanted on arrest warrants.

They filed charges against another 1,624, seized hundreds of illegal weapons and quantities of explosive and recovered hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of loot, including at least 18 ancient paintings and 102 cars.

Using jeeps on the mainland and motorboats in the Venice Lagoon, police checked the identities of more than 30,000 persons and ownership of more than 20,000 cars.

Among persons arrested in Naples was Antonio Camporeale, 52, an alleged Mafia chieftain from Palermo, Sicily, wanted to serve a 5½-year term for criminal conspiracy.

Welfare Waiters Bar Way

VANCOUVER (CP) — Traffic on a downtown street was blocked by angry welfare recipients Thursday when a strike by civic workers prevented them from receiving their cheques. (See also Page 23.)

About 150 demonstrators laid down or sat in the street outside the welfare office, blocking a transit bus and several cars.

The situation threatened to turn ugly when motorists attempted to drive through the crowd. A few cars were rocked by demonstrators but the drivers withdrew when it became obvious the crowd would not move.

The welfare recipients ended their protest after four hours, when they were told another welfare office was open and would remain open until all cheques had been distributed.

The protesters were taken to the open office by one of the transit buses they had blocked.

SAIGON — A mixed force of South Vietnamese soldiers, marines, militia and cavalry troopers has repulsed a major communist effort to outflank the northernmost provincial capital of Quang Tri City, military headquarters reported today.

Peace Talks Probably Turn Secret

PARIS (AP) — The North Vietnamese said Thursday secret peace talks on the Vietnam war are probable. The statement was issued after both sides returned to the bargaining table for the first time in five weeks.

The session produced both charges and denials of a North Vietnamese invasion of the South, but both sides agreed to meet next Thursday.

Nguyen Minh Vy, North Vietnam's deputy chief delegate, said Politburo member Le Duc Tho will arrive from Hanoi within a week. He then added that secret talks are probable. Tho met privately in Paris last year with Henry Kissinger, President Nixon's national security adviser.

Chant Not Running In Next Election

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislative Reporter

● Bennett offes to arbitrate, Page 25

At a news conference, on Bennett's return from a two-week business and vacation trip, the premier named Public Works Minister W. N. Chant as the most likely cabinet drop-out.

This possibility was confirmed some time later when Chant announced he wouldn't seek the Social Credit nomination again in the Victoria riding he has represented ever since 1953. He has held the works portfolio for 17 years.

Chant, who will be 77 years old in July and whose wife died recently, said he was in good health but felt it was time to step down so that "other capable people can fill the gap."

The premier said of Chant: "He's rendered great service and I would be happy if he would run again."

But Chant later told the Colonist he felt it was better to step down while he still felt fit enough to enjoy life. He declined to discuss his future plans but said he would remain in his present post until after the next election.

"It will be a break in my life," the minister said. "But I believe it was Solomon in the Book of Proverbs who says, 'the end of the matter is better than the beginning'."

Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan and Highways Minister Wesley Black, two of the three remaining original members of Bennett's 1952 cabinet apart from the premier himself, are also rumored to be thinking of retirement. Bennett said, however, he believes both will run again in the next election.

Earlier this week Kiernan was questioned on this topic

Welfare Waiters Bar Way

VANCOUVER (CP) — Traffic on a downtown street was blocked by angry welfare recipients Thursday when a strike by civic workers prevented them from receiving their cheques. (See also Page 23.)

About 150 demonstrators laid down or sat in the street outside the welfare office, blocking a transit bus and several cars.

The situation threatened to turn ugly when motorists attempted to drive through the crowd. A few cars were rocked by demonstrators but the drivers withdrew when it became obvious the crowd would not move.

The welfare recipients ended their protest after four hours, when they were told another welfare office was open and would remain open until all cheques had been distributed.

The protesters were taken to the open office by one of the transit buses they had blocked.

Few Election Hints In Turner's 'Budget'

He did it by telling the Commons he expects to bring a taxing-and-spending budget before the House Monday, May 8. He amplified that statement outside the House, saying:

The Turner statement was the closest thing to solid information opposition MPs have been able to pry from the Liberal front benches since speculation about an imminent election gripped the current Parliament about two months ago.

What Turner foresees and the decision of Prime Minister Trudeau, who is the only man who can decide when an election will be, could well be different. Turner was careful to say only that he "expects" to deliver his budget May 8. NDP Leader David Lewis said "it remains to be seen" whether this expectation will be realized.

Making his budget-date statement in a reply to Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West), Turner also apparently kept the door open on a budget presentation followed by a quick dissolution, perhaps before the six-day budget debate had run its full course.

Lambert asked a double-barrelled question — whether the government had given legislative priority both to bringing in a budget and holding reply covered only the first part of the question.

Tory Leader Won't Pledge $150 Pension

VANCOUVER (CP) — Opposition leader Robert Stanfield Thursday scuttled pensioner's hopes that a Conservative government would implement a $150 old age pension.

Such a pension, he told members of the Pensioners for Action Now group, would mean a total annual expenditure of $1.5 billion, twice the amount now spent.

"I'm anxious to go as far as possible," the Conservative leader said. "But I have to keep in mind that this (expenditure) would result in a very substantial increase in taxes."

And the increased taxes, he said, would add considerably to already widespread unemployment.

As an alternative, Stanfield promised a Tory government would provide a "substantial increase" in pensions, and would ensure that pensions keep pace with changes in the cost of living. He would not elaborate on what a "substantial increase" might be.

Saigon Repulses Quang Tri Flank

Colonist - Los Angeles Times Service

SAIGON — A mixed force of South Vietnamese soldiers, marines, militia and cavalry troopers has repulsed a major communist effort to outflank the northernmost provincial capital of Quang Tri City, military headquarters reported today.

Though some fighting continued around the exposed capital just below the demilitarized zone, South Vietnamese headquarters was confident the tank-led enemy columns had been turned back. The South Vietnamese were issuing overlapping casualty reports indicating from 300 to 500 North Vietnamese killed and six to 10 tanks knocked out.

The battle in Quang Tri far overshadowed ground fighting elsewhere but it was a matter of degree. The communist offensive which began Good Friday entered its fifth week with critical threats being maintained against the highland provincial capital of Kon-

Peace Talks Probably Turn Secret

PARIS (AP) — The North Vietnamese said Thursday secret peace talks on the Vietnam war are probable. The statement was issued after both sides returned to the bargaining table for the first time in five weeks.

The session produced both charges and denials of a North Vietnamese invasion of the South, but both sides agreed to meet next Thursday.

Nguyen Minh Vy, North Vietnam's deputy chief delegate, said Politburo member Le Duc Tho will arrive from Hanoi within a week. He then added that secret talks are probable. Tho met privately in Paris last year with Henry Kissinger, President Nixon's national security adviser.

Brandt Saved By Two Votes

BONN (AP) — Chancellor Willy Brandt narrowly defeated an opposition attempt Thursday to oust him. The vote in parliament brought guarded sighs of relief to his supporters in East and West who had feared his policy of easing European tensions might fail.

But the crisis was not over. Opposition Christian Democrats mounted a fresh challenge to Brandt's coalition of Social Democrats and Free Democrats.

The opposition failed by two votes to unseat him through a no-confidence motion raised in the Bundestag, the lower house. The Christian Democrats won 247 votes but needed 249 of the 496 members.

Undaunted, they claimed the three abstentions meant Brandt did not have an absolute majority, and pushed quickly for a test vote on Brandt's budget.

Fighting back, the Free Democrats announced they

Floating Currency

Officers said the intruders dismantled the burglar alarm, cut telephone lines, entered the vault and cut a hole in the top of a small safe.

Then they carried water in buckets from the bank's basement and dumped it in the opening. Bundled currency floated to the top and were skimmed off, authorities said. Officials declined to say how much money was stolen.

Trudeau Backtracks

RCMP Again

OTTAWA (CP) — Removal of RCMP initials from buildings and patrol cars has been halted, said a statement issued Thursday night by the prime minister's office.

The statement said Prime Minister Trudeau had announced the decision at a meeting in Edson, Alta., "in response to many representations" sent to him and to Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer.

He referred to a public controversy centred in Western Canada about a move — attributed to an RCMP decision in 1968 — to have the initials RCMP removed from patrol cars and buildings in favor of the word police atop the RCMP coat of arms.

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker was a leading opponent of the move, which peaked in parliamentary discussion some weeks ago.

The Trudeau statement released here said:

"The high stature enjoyed by the RCMP in Canada and throughout the world is a matter of pride to all Canadians. The government is determined not to permit any issue to detract from that prestige.

"The dislike of the new signs by Canadians — western Canadians in particular — has been communicated to us clearly. And we have listened."

B.C., Hydro Ignore Bus Bidder

VANCOUVER (CP) — A retired U.S. Air Force general said Wednesday he has offered the B.C. Hydro $1.1 million cash for its Lower Mainland transit system and claims he can make the debt-ridden operation pay.

Timothy James Manning, who has been in the transport business all his life, except for his military service, said his problem is that both Hydro and the provincial government appear to be ignoring his offer.

"They have barely even acknowledged it and they won't negotiate, which is most unusual," said the 63-year-old North Vancouver resident, who moved here from Seattle 14 years ago.

This is Mannings third offer to buy the ailing bus system. In 1958 he put in a $5 million bid for the bus system to the private B.C. Electric Co., forerunner of B.C. Hydro. It was rejected.

In 1962, after the government took over the power company, he made a second bid of $5.5 million. Again he was ignored.

Now he's down to $1.1 million and says he's still being rebuffed.

Manning said he has had solid financial backing for each of his offers, but does not want to name anyone.

He said people should not be taxed any longer to support an operation that is losing money.

The system costs about $17 million a year to operate and government figures put its annual losses at $2.3 million.

Earlier this month, the government offered the Greater Vancouver Regional District a base subsidy of $2.3 million, plus half of any operating deficit beyond that amount, to take over the system.

Manning did not give any details on how he would make the bus line pay.

No Second Money in This Tournament

Attitude on Littler's Side

By JIM MURRAY

RANCHO LA COSTA — Twenty-six out of 28 players who qualified teed it up in the Tournament of Champions down here last week. Gary Player had a prior commitment. So did Gene Littler.

Gene is in a tournament where he needs a two on the 18th hole. He's in a deep bunker and he has to hole the shot to make the cut. There's no second money in this tournament. First prize is life.

Golfers are used to hazards. You can take off your shoes and get out of lateral water. You can hit an inch behind the ball and par out of trap. You can play a cut shot out of the rough. But how do you play out of a melanin? What's the club for malignancy? Is there any way to birdie cancer?

Gene littler has won 25 tournaments. That makes him one of the registered giants of the game. He won this tournament three times in a row. He has won the U.S. Open. Not many living men can say that.

They said his "attitude" was a big part of Gene's game. He won or lost with a shrug. He played for money, not for history. He never could abide much of the publicity humbug that went with being a star in our era. Gene just showed up for work like the plumber, carpenter, electrician or milkman. He was a mechanic. He never expected to be adored for doing a good job. He came from a long line of people who did good jobs.

They said he was "colorless." They called him Gene The Machine. He didn't have armies, navies, fleas, banditos. Littler's "fans" were Mrs. Littler.

Well, not quite. A number of us who watched Littler over the years, who waited for the hat to get too small, the ego to begin to show, came slowly to realize Gene was not a golfer, he was a man. A helluva man.

You never heard Gene cry, complain, throw a club, snarl at a marshal. He never showed up in purple plaid pants. Shucks, he was on the tour 17 years and he never even got sunburned. He looked without rancor, prejudice, and sometimes without even interest on the world.

He was a homebody who played until he won the rent money, then went home by Labor Day to do the important work — raise a family. I never heard him raise his voice or his fist. You never heard him say a malicious or unkind thing.

I don't know anything about his religion — Gene's not the type of guy to talk about that — but I always figured he was moved, for some reason, Christ had in mind when he founded Christianity. That'll embarrass Gene, but it's high time somebody embarrassed him.

He was kind of an asthmatic kid but he had the most gorgeous, compact swing that could ever happen to a player. They said it would last "forever."

Well, "forever" was age 41. "Forever" was the other day. Gene Littler cannot raise his left arm high enough to comb his hair, never mind hit a four-iron.

He went to a doctor for a routine checkup a few months ago. He felt fine. The doctor wasmoved, for some reason, to check under Gene's armpits. The lump the sawbones found bothered him. But not nearly so much as what he found in the lump.

The idea of a cancer operation would scare most men into a dead faint. But Gene has always played the hole as it came up. Poker-faced, phlegmatic, pragmatic, he's got his driver out again. He thinks he's on the fairway. He smiled as he confronted the golfing press down here the other day.

"I'll be playing again by the end of the year. I'll probably be just as bad as I ever was," he grinned.

I don't know as it matters that Bobby Mitchell won the tournament here. But I do want Gene Littler to get his 26th career win. This is one sudden-death playoff where I really care. If anyone has the temperament to make the other guy blow up in this kind of a match, it's Gene Littler. So I'm betting he'll win his fourth tournament of champions. He always was toughest in the tourneys where they let the rough grow.

Littler

Rangers Need Cup Win To Beat Back Memories

NEW YORK Rangers are looking ahead, but the past stays with them and only 1972 Stanley Cup victory will beat back the intruding memories.

They don't concern past playoff failures because the Rangers sort of shot down the libel about not being able to "win the big ones" when they successively disposed of Montreal Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks. What can't be ignored even in the face of those triumps is their record against Boston Bruins.

The clubs who open the best-of-seven 1972 final on Sunday have met in seven previous playoff series — the 1927 and 1928 semi-finals, the 1929 final, the 1939, 1940 and 1958 semi-finals and in the 1970 quarter-finals.

MUCH STRONGER

Nothing can be gathered that is important now from the first six series (Boston won four of them) but the Bruins proved handily the better club in 1970, winning by four games to two and outscoring their rivals, 25-16.

"But", says New York-coach Emile Francis, "this Ranger team is much stronger now than the one that lost in 1970. It has a lot of new faces.

NEW FACES

Since that 1970 series, the Rangers point out, they have added goalkeeper Gilles Villemure, defencemen Dale Rolfe, Gary Doak, and Jim Dorey and forwards Bobby Rousseau, Pete Stemkowski, Bruce MacGregor, Glen Sather and Gene Carr along. And veteran Phil Goyette joined their ranks just before the playoff start.

However, gone from the 1970 Rangers are defenceman Tim Horton, Al Hamilton and Arnie Brown and forwards Orland Kurtenbach, Jack Egers, Bob Nevin and Dave Balon.

TURNOVER HELPFUL

It is generally conceded that the talent turnover has been beneficial, but it remains to be seen whether the gain has been enough. It can also be argued that the Bruins have also improved in the past two seasons.

The National League's East Division champions haven't had as many changes as the Rangers but they have added proven quality in forward Mike Walton and defenceman Carol Vadnais, and Garnet Bailey is a rugged, capable youngster.

EXCHANGES A PLUS

The Bruins count the exchanges a plus and can point to the fact that Phil Esposito has blossomed into a sensational scorer in the past two seasons while linemate Wayne Cashman has developed into a standout two-way player.

It would be all academic at the moment but for the facts of the past season. The Rangers blew into Boston on Oct. 10 and ruined the Bruins' home opener, then fell flat on the promise of the impressive 4-1 victory.

EXTRA MOTIVATION

In five subsequent meetings, the Rangers only scored four goals while the Bruins, reportedly given an extra motivation by disparaging remarks made by New York defenceman Brad Park in his book "Play The Man," scored 24. It was 6-1, 4-1 and 2-0 in the three New York meetings and 8-1 and 4-1 in the last two Boston faceups.

"It's a new season now," claims MacGregor. "When you get into the playoffs, especially the final, what happened in the past doesn't mean that much any more."

"The way we've been playing I can't imagine any team defeating us," says captain Vic Hadfield.

There is more restraint in the camp of the Bruins, who give Rangers full respect.

Coach Tom Johnson, who volunteered that "only a great club" could eliminate Montreal and then take Chicago in four games, indicated his club wasn't overawed.

"I have to think we have something," he said, "so the way I look at it is that they will have to come to us. They will have to try us on for size and then see which way it goes."

There was perhaps a hint there that the final will be more physical than the two previous series involving the Rangers. However, the Rangers have now some muscle of their own. It promises to be a fine series. The Rangers are motivated by their desire to prove they do not flop when it's crucial while the Bruins, who probably would have preferred a revenge shot at Canadiens, are still smarting from the quarter-final upset a year ago. And they don't like Park.

Bucyk Leads Bruin Pack On Playoff Scoring List

Boston Bruins, who set a record for a four-game series in the semi-final triumph over St. Louis Blues, have the top four scorers in the Stanley Cup playdowns.

Veteran-leftwinger John Bucyk is on top with 17 points, one more than Phil Esposito and Bobby Orr and three more than John McKenzie.

Orr set a playoff record by getting 14 assists from the nine games the first two series required and has a minimum of four games in which to add to it. However, Bucyk and Esposito, who leads in goals with nine will both have to be at their most effective if they are to erase records for most points and most goals.

Bucyk needs to get 11 points against the New York Rangers to gain the record for most points for one playoff year, set by Esposito in 1970 and tied by Frank Mahovlich last year, while Esposito needs six goals in the final to erase the mark of 14 set by Mahovlich last; year.

A feature of the Boston performance to date has been the play of the Fred Stanfield-Bucyk-McKenzie line. It has accounted for 19 goals and 44 points to take over from Esposito's unit as the most-dangerous Boston line.

The Rangers have so far been led in playoff scoring by Bobby Rousseau, who has performed brilliantly as the replacement for Jean Ratelle on the top New York line. The former Montreal star has four goals and 13 points one more than linemate Vic Hadfield, whose 12 points included six goals.

Bill Fairbairn is next on the Ranger list with 10 points, five of them goals. But while the New York leaders have played one more game than the Bruins, their point totals measure up in that the Rangers faced the tougher opposition, eliminating Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks.

Expos Blast Dodgers To Give Astros Lead

Montreal Expos broke loose for 16 hits Thursday night and made Houston Astros the leaders in the National League's Western Division.

Early leader of the Eastern Division, Canada's only major league baseball club ended a three-game losing streak by besting Los Angeles Dodgers, 7-5.

Dodgers entered the game tied with the Astros, who weren't scheduled for Thursday action in a program which listed no action in the American League.

Ron Hunt hit run-scoring singles in the fourth and sixth innings to pace the Expos to a 4-0 lead but it was a three-run seventh inning which won it when the Dodgers rallied in the late innings.

Singles by Bob Bailey, Ken Singleton, Tim Foli and Denny Lemaster, a wild pitch and a sacrific fly produced the deciding three runs.

Victory kept the Expos in second place, one game behind the hurrying New York Mets, who made it six wins in a row by slipping past the outlucked San Diego Padres, 4-3.

Beaten for the fourth time by one run, the Padres were done in by Jerry Grote, who hit a home run and a run-scoring single, and Rusty Staub, who hit his first homer of the season.

Meanwhile, things continued to be tough for last year's division winners. The San Francisco Giants were outslugged, 7-6, by Philadelphia Phillies and the series-winning Pittsburgh Pirates were nipped, 5-4, by Cincinnati Reds.

A barage of home runs won it for the Phillies. Don Money hit for the circuit twice and Deron Johnson and rookie Greg Luzinski, who broke a 4-4 tie in the ninth inning, did it once each.

In Pittsburgh, where the home team got off to a 3-0 lead, the Reds won when a single by Ted Uhlaender, his first in the National League, and a sacrifice fly by Dennis Menke produced two runs.

Shamrocks Lure Talented Youth

Victoria Shamrocks added more depth and size Thursday with the signing of coveted Mainland youngster.

Team-manager Norm Kowalyk announced that John Kastelein, a six-foot, two-inch 215-pounder who played last year with the junior New Westminster Salmonbellies had been given his clearance and agreed to terms.

Kastelein, who has attended four workouts, is expected to arrive here on the weekend and should be in the lineup Wednesday when the Sharmrocks open their home season in the Western Lacrosse Association.

Padres Replace Gomez

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Preston Gomez was fired Thursday as manager of San Diego Padres and third-base coach Don Zimmer, 41, was named to succeed him. Gomez directed the National League baseball club since it was formed in August, 1968.

The announcement was made by E. J. Buzzie Bavasi, club president. Bavasi said the change was made after he and Gomez had met for a short time earlier in the day.

"I explained to Preston why I thought a change in managers was necessary at this time," Bavasi said.

The Padres are in fourth place in the Western Division with a 4-7 record but have lost five of their last six games.

Zimmer, in his 23rd season in professional baseball, rejoined the Padres' organization this year. In 1969 he managed San Diego's farm team in Key West, Fla., and in 1970 handled the club's Salt Lake City team in the Pacific Coast League.

Zimmer was third-base coach at Montreal last season.

Blues, United Clash Here For Soccer Final Berth

United and Blues clash at 2 p.m. Saturday in the last Coast League match at Royal Athletic Park this season.

Paul's Canadians won the other sudden-death semi-final last Sunday and, if United beats Blues, the first meeting in the two-game, total-goal final will be in Vancouver Sunday, May 7, with the second clash at Centennial Stadium on Saturday, May 13.

But the Blues, coached by Sandy James, improved rapidly after a bad start and climbed from the basement into the playoffs.

Blues have won their last five games, including a 3-2 victory over Victoria Gorge Molsons in a clash to decide fourth place.

Much of this improvement has been due to the scoring feats of centre-forward, Ken Phillips, punter for the B.C. Lions of the Canadian Football League.

Tom Westwater, formerly of Victoria, and Peter Nolan have also done a lot toward getting the Blues into the playoffs.

If Irvine is fit, the starting lineup will be Barry Sadler in goal, Howie Anderson and Ray Telford in the fullback berths, Ranjit Dillon, Irvine and Brian Robinson as the half-back line and Dan Lomas, Ron Thompson, Tom Forrester, Pete Roberts and Jan Bentley as the forwards.

United's player awards for the season will be presented at half time.

Involvement Key To School Relays

Involvement is the key to what officials expect will be a highly successful fourth-annual All Schools Relays.

This year's meet opens at Esquimalt high school at 5 p.m. next Monday and continues Wednesday and Thursday evenings at Centennial Stadium.

And it has a new format. This time there will be no invitational events and instead more schools and more students will be involved.

More than 2000 athletes from some 60 schools, both public and private, are expected to take part in the three-day meet. Last year, about 1500 competed.

Main emphasis will be on relays with senior high, junior high and elementary schools all running 8x50 metres, 4x100, 4x200, 4x400 and 4x800 events.

Only other events on the track will be the 100 metres for all divisions, an 800-metre race for senior girls and a senior boys' mile.

As well there will be "cross-country" races, to be run aroumd the outside of the tracks. The only field events will be high jump and shot put.

Mt. Douglas will be trying for its fourth straight senior high-school title. Last year, Mt. Doug easily won both boys' and girls' team titles. Oak Bay was second over all.

Lansdowne took honors in the junior high school division last season Gordon Head won the first two years.

Richmond will be trying for its third straight victory in the elementary school contest. Lake Hill won the elementary title first time out.

A spokesman for the B.C. Medical Association said Thursday that it has had inquiries from 17 of the 3,300 practising physicians in the province. There was no indication how many of the 17 are actually doing balance billing.

The BCMA has advised doctors that it will supply the forms which have to be signed by the patient to make the procedure legal. This strategy is not to encourage balance billing but instead is meant to simplify the procedure for individual doctors, who otherwise might have to consult their own laywers as to the wording of the form.

PROVINCIAL COURT

A 23-year-old man who took from both his brother-in-law in Edmonton and a Victoria home where he was a guest will be sentenced May 11 in Victoria Provincial Court for theft and forgery.

The man, Larry Erwin Blake, pleaded guilty Thursday to two Victoria charges containing two counts of theft involving more than $50 and three counts of forgery. He was remanded by Judge William Ostler to May 11 for sentence after a pre-sentence report.

Testimony by two Victoria policemen disclosed Blake took a credit card from his brother-in-law in Edmonton before arriving in Victoria last weekend.

Last Monday, while a guest in a home at 314 Catherine, Blake took a wallet and its contents from one resident and an $800 motorcycle belonging to another. The wallet contained $85 cash plus cheques for $198 and $25.50.

On Monday and Tuesday, Blake used the credit card to obtain goods worth $32.44 from two stores and also cashed the $198 cheque — and damaged the motorcycle by driving it through a fence on Irma in Saanich.

He abandoned it there but went back Tuesday to get it. He took it to a repair shop and later was apprehended. At the time of his arrest, Blake has $75.45 on him.

Charles Norman Henry Height, 30, no fixed address, was sentenced by Ostler to a total of three months in jail after pleading guilty April 13 to two Saanich charges containing three counts of indecent acts and one of theft involving less than $50.

A Saanich policeman told court two of the indecent-act counts involved exposure by Height before teenage girls in the Douglas Street underpass while the third incident occurred near Mount View high school. The theft count concerned gasoline taken from a parked car.

A suspended sentence and a six-month probationary term were set by Ostler for Michael John Sullivan, 17, of 305 Dennison, who pleaded guilty to an Oak Bay charge of theft involving less than $50 — the theft of a wheelbarrow wheel March 4 from a neighbor's yard for use in a minibike Sullivan was building. Ostler instructed the youth to apologize to the neighbor and restore the wheelbarrow within a week.

□

Medicare Billing

Patients' Go-ahead Ignored

Only a handful of British Columbia's doctors have shown interest in balance billing, a procedure by which they collect directly from the patient reimbursements not covered by medicare.

A spokesman for the B.C. Medical Association said Thursday that it has had inquiries from 17 of the 3,300 practising physicians in the province. There was no indication how many of the 17 are actually doing balance billing.

Dr. Donald Shorting of Victoria has been presenting the necessary forms to his patients for nearly a month and he says none have refused to sign it.

He plans to actually start balance billing on June 1 if the fee dispute between the BCMA and the provincial government is not settled by then. The parties have not been able to reach agreement on a new schedule and the Medical Services Commission is still paying doctors the rates they were getting Dec. 31.

"I make an effort to speak with each of the patients individually and explain why I am asking their approval to bill them the extra amount," he said. "So far, none has refused to sign the form."

He said balance billing would bring greater responsibility to both doctors and patients — the doctor because he would cease charging frivolous sums to medicare and patients because they would have to think twice about obtaining medical care they will have to pay directly for.

School Merger Approved

Consolidation of the three elementary schools in the James Bay area at one site near Macdonald Park now has been approved in principle by the James Bay Community Association.

Association spokesman Mrs. Cindy Arden, of 423 Luxton, said Wednesday night that the decision had been taken at a general meeting of the group earlier this week.

The approval reverses a position against the consolidation taken by association president Sam Bawlf on behalf of the group at a public meeting April 14.

Mrs. Arden said the group had decided it wanted the schools to be consolidated because this would provide better facilities for the children.

But it also wanted the school board to keep the two small schools which would be phased out — Beacon Hill and South Park — for educational and community purposes.

It also wanted the expanded James Bay elementary to become a community school for general public use and hoped the board will consult with it in planning the expansion.

Bawlf, who was out of town and not available for comment Wednesday, met with trustees to discuss the issue before the community association meeting.

Trustee Peter Bunn said that at the meeting, which he described as "very worthwhile," the board attempted to show the association the "basic economic sense" of the consolidation program.

Ungainly harvesting machine creeps toward ocean

Sea Monster Digs Clams by the Ton

MASSET — On an isolated beach 18 miles northeast of Masset on the Queen Charlotte Islands, an odd looking beach "monster" is busily digging two tons of clams a day.

The "monster" is really a clamdigger undergoing sea trials to find out if the area will be productive.

A radiotelephone was recently installed in the belly of the machine for the purpose of reporting findings to officials 18 miles away. The unusual installation, performed by the B.C. Tel, was prompted by a request from the digger's owners to have direct communications with the unit's three-man crew. The owners are normally located in an office in Masset.

The unique installation was actually the second performed by telephone company employees on this project. The first ended in disaster when the 46-ton machine broke down while operating in eight feet of water. The drive shaft, driven by two of four diesel engines aboard, collapsed, and the contraption became useless.

The radio-telephone was used to place a call for help and a large earth-moving machine was sent to retrieve the unit but the initial rescue attempts was unsuccessful. The tide moved in covering the digger completely. With the help of two earth-moving machines, the digger was finally pulled to shore. The radio equipment was repaired, and the machine is digging clams again.

The clamdigger, built by B.C. Packers in Vancouver, is the first of its kind. It stands 25 feet above the ground and moves in the sand at a snail's pace.

Cuban Stowaway Off to Greece

NANAIMO — A Cuban girl stowaway is not single as first thought and is now trying to go to Greece to join her sailor husband.

In a further development Thursday in the case of Lydia Del Rio Turino, 20, parliamentary secretary to Immigration Minister Bryce Mackasey, Ray Perrault of Vancouver, said he will make a personal report to the minister about the Cuban refugee.

Speaking to newsmen at a school career exposition, Perrault said he would be making inquiries into the case while he is in Nanaimo and his report will be made when he returns to Ottawa next week.

The girl arrived in Nanaimo three months ago aboard the Greek freighter Dorine Patalios and was allowed to stay in Canada after Mackasey issued a special permit.

However, Thursday it was learned that the Cuban girl is married to a Greek sailor, Ioannis Skovalos. The steps to have the woman to go to Greece are said to have been initiated by him.

Sailor Husband Wants Her To Come Home

An official of the immigration department in Nanaimo, Harold Miller, said Mrs. Skovalos made a voluntary declaration of marital status recently. It had been believed originally that the woman was single and had lived with her parents in Cuba.

She stowed away on the freighter while the vessel was docked in Havana and was taken off the ship when it arrived at Nanaimo in late January. It is believed her husband was serving aboard the ship at that time.

Disposition of the application to leave Canada will be decided by immigration officials in Ottawa and will hinge on the issuance of an identity permit by the minister.

Perrault said he hopes to talk to the woman today. The outcome of that interview, he added, will form the basis of his report to Mackasey.

B.C. Building Lockout Today

Bennett's Arbitrator Offer Draws Smiles and Doubts

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

As the construction industry and 18 unions prepared for today's province-wide lockout, there didn't appear to be any ready acceptance of Premier Bennett's surprising and somewhat reluctant offer to serve as an arbitrator.

There was no official comment from either the Construction Labor Relations Association, which represents 840 contractors, or the 57,000-member B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council.

CLRA president C. J. Connaghan said he would have no comment until he is approached by the premier.

However, some sources expressed both amusement and doubt concerning the seriousness of Bennett's offer. His ability in such a role was also questioned.

"It's not something I would choose to do," the premier said in a Vancouver interview shortly after his return to B.C. from a trip to eastern Canada and the U.S.

He said if he did take on the job the parties would have to agree beforehand to accept binding settlement.

"It would be a difficult job but it would be my duty if they can't get anybody else," he said.

The lockout, which CLRA says could idle up to 30,000 tradesmen and halt $500 million in construction, is scheduled for 4:30 p.m. today. The effect won't be felt until Monday morning when the next normal work week begins.

It follows failure by the unions and CLRA to come to terms on new agreements. The last contracts expired March 31.

One union official said of Bennett's offer:

"The man has considerable knowledge in the field of politics. But he certainly doesn't know enough about the construction industry to be suitable as a mediator."

A contractor said he wondered if Bennett might be "putting up a trial balloon" to see what the thinking was on the question of arbitration — something that is being advocated often these days as an eventual replacement for the strike or lockout weapon.

"There's got to be a better answer than what we've got now," he said. "A dispute such as this gets settled eventually — it has to be. But in the meantime it is very expensive in terms of productivity and the health of the economy."

He said $1.4 million in wages would be lost daily during the lockout.

While the lockout would be expected to affect 30,000 tradesmen, if it lasts long enough it will create a job loss in supporting industries such as supply, manufacturing and service, the contractor said.

Labor Minister James Chabot said he didn't anticipate any action on the part of the government this week or next week. Meanwhile, he will be watching the situation closely, he said.

There had been a suggestion by Bennett that Chabot was looking for an acceptable arbitrator for the dispute. But Chabot said this is not the case at the moment.

$965,000 Courtenay Proposal

Recreation Future In Voters' Hands

COURTENAY — Voters in the Courtenay school district will decide June 3 whether or not they favor a $965,000 recreation package for the area.

The school district covers and area from Buckley Bay to the Oyster River

The Comox-Strathcona Regional Board passed a bylaw authorizing the referendum at its meeting this week. An advance poll will be held June 1 and 2.

The question which will be put to the voters reads:

"Are you in favor of the regional district undertaking the function of constructing, equipping, enlarging, operating and maintaining an arena recreational complex, and the making of capital grants for construction of recreational facilities to the town of Comox, city of Courtenay, village of Cumberland and Union Bay Community Club on behalf of a designated area comprised of electoral areas A, B, C and Comox, Courtenay and Cumberland?"

The referendum if passed will provide an arena complex at an estimated cost of $500,000, swimming pools in Courteney, Comox and Cumberland at an individual cost of $150,000 and a breakwater and boat launch ramp at Union Bay to cost $465,000.

The placing of the referendum follows many months of study by several committees, one of which was unable to reach any form of agreement. Public meetings were held and a controversial recreation report from A. V. Gray Management Science Ltd. was also received.

Part of the problem was the widely discussed issue of an indoor swimming pool versus an ice arena for Courtenay.

Nanaimo, Chemainus Laud Split

CHEMAINUS — Residents of Chemainus appear to be in favor of the amalgamation of the south half of the Ladysmith school district with Cowichan school district.

Mrs. Jean Fyffe, municipal council representative for the Chemainus Ratepayers' Association, said Thursday she felt merging was the answer that had to come.

"Economically and educationally I don't think it's a bad thing. It was getting too expensive for us to operate two high schools. Cowichan high school is quite good and can offer a greater opportunity for our commercial and vocational students.

"We couldn't offer as good a selection of courses at Chemainus and our occupational students were getting nothing," Mrs. Fyffe said.

Mrs. A. W. Roberts, a Chemainus housewife with three school-age children, said she did not like the idea of her children travelling a greater distance to school.

"My children seem to think the whole thing is great, so if they do, I suppose it must be better for them," she added.

Newly elected school trustee Esme Cossey from Chemainus said, "I think it's something that has been coming for a while. I see nothing wrong with it. In terms of the benefits for the students it is good.

"Eventually all senior high school students will go to Duncan where there is a greater variety of courses. Concerning the transportation problem, buses will be run and the distance from Chemainus to Duncan is not that great."

School District Merger

NANAIMO — Amalgamation of part of the Ladysmith school district will add about 1,300 students to Nanaimo district and will raise the total student population to nearly 13,000.

Chairman of Nanaimo school board, Mrs. Margaret Fuller, said Thursday that virtually all of those students would continue to attend classes in the same schools as at present with the only difference being those schools would come under the jurisdiction of Nanaimo school board.

Mrs. Fuller was commenting on the planned abolition of the Ladysmith school district. The move was approved earlier this week by the Ladysmith board. It was announced at that time that trustees had accepted an education department recommendation that the district be split with the northern part going to Nanaimo and the southern portion merging with the Cowichan school district.

"It's a little difficult to say anything about it at this time since we have had no communication from either the Ladysmith school board or the education department on the subject," she said.

However, Mrs. Fuller said her board would lend complete support and all possible co-operation to the move, "providing it does not result in any form of financial hardship on the taxpayers in this district."

The board chairman said she understands there are equalizing factors built in to the government grant structure which would prevent added financial burdens from falling on the shoulders of the board in the district receiving the new territory.

"Another thing we will have to guard against is that any educational advantages we have over some of the smaller districts are maintained."

She admits there will be considerable red tape involved in the merger but feels that it can be sorted out before the effective date of the merger, Sept. 1.

And she said she expects a series of meetings will be called involving Nanaimo and Ladysmith trustees and the education department for the purpose of settling details.

Such items as student transportation, budget takeover, the disposition of Ladysmith district office staff, elections and existing contracts with Ladysmith teachers are expected to be discussed.

The split in the Ladysmith district will bring about 53 per cent of that district under Nanaimo jurisdiction with the balance going to Cowichan.

"It should work out well for all concerned. We are looking forward to the advantages such as bulk purchasing for a larger district and other administrative advantages," Mrs. Fuller said.

MUSIC ON TAP AGAIN

SHAWNIGAN LAKE — Vancouver Island musicians will meet for the second orchestral day at Shawnigan Lake boy's school, Sunday.

It will start 11:30 a.m. Following the first successful orchestral day, Feb. 6, it was decided to hold another similar event.

More than 40 players took part then performing the Thieving Magpie Overture and Brahms' Second Symphony. One of the organizers P. J. Kearns said Thursday, "This time we intend to do some more work on the Brahms Symphony and read through Schubert's C-Major Symphony."

Musical director this Sunday will again be Robert Cooper. Kearns said: "We hope to have a third orchestral day, June 18, when we may be joined by a 25-piece string orchestra of university students from Toronto."

Forest Talks Continue Today

VANCOUVER (CP) — Meetings will continue today between the coast negotiating committee of the International Woodworkers of America and top officials of the B.C. forest industry.

Jack Moore, regional president of the union, said the committee met Thursday with employer representatives headed by Robert Bonner, chief executive officer of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., to attempt to resolve a dispute involving fallers.

Fallers returned to work earlier this week at Franklin River and Kennedy Lake and Wednesday four forest firms won injunctions in B.C. Supreme Court that ruled their walkouts unlawful.

Injunctions were granted to Canadian Forest Products at Englewood, Weldwood of Canada Ltd. at Squamish, Crown Zellerbach at Courtenay and B.C. Forest Products at Pitt Lake.

Judge A. A. MacKoff ruled in granting the injunctions that the walkouts by fallers were designed to force the companies to implement price schedules for felled and bucked timber and agree to other conditions of employment.

School Mill Rate Higher But Drop in Tax Likely

COURTENAY — A budget of more than $5 million has been set by the Courtenay school district — a rise of .48 mill.

However, the increase in the provincial homeowner grant is expected to more than offset the mill increase so that net school taxes should be down for most people.

Nearly $2.5 million of the budget must be raised by local taxation at a mill rate of 33.78.

The city of Courtenay must pay $560,444 or 34.74 mills; Comox $282,234 or 34.71 mills; Cumberland, $69,713 or 34.73 mills and the rural area $1,371,972 or 33.10 mills.

In a report to the board, secretary Roy Mills said there were several interesting things about the budget, one being the overall district mill rate. "This is an increase," he said, "being 33.78 this year against last year's 33.30, an increase of .48 mill or 1.44 per cent."

Another point Mills made was that the assessment of the district as a whole has dropped slightly from last year while in the past it has been increasing by about 6 per cent each year. Had this growth continued the mill rate this year would have been about 32.63.

Mills said the reduction in assessment is "entirely attributable to the rural area where it went down by more than $2 million. The rural area now contributes 61 per cent of the district's assessment compared to 64 per cent last year.

Each of the municipalities of Courtenay, Comox and Cumberland showed an increase in assessment, Mills said.

Beaver Creek Faces Change

PORT ALBERNI — There will be three new faces on the Beaver Creek Improvement District board as a result of voting at the recent annual meeting.

Alvin Irg and Walter Mallory replace Frank Anderson and Peter DeVries for three-year terms, while Morley Jamieson will complete the two years remaining of the three-year term of Art Harrington who has resigned.

A motion to hold another referendum on fire protection in the Beaver Creek area this year was defeated in favor of a motion to have a comprehensive study of costs and methods. Results will be presented to a general meeting in three months time. Defeat of the original motion will preclude another referendum being held within the next year.

Fire-Torn Building Demolition Headache

NANAIMO — A permit has been issued by the city of Nanaimo for demolition of the Edwards Tire building on Terminal Ave.

The shell of the building has been standing since fire destroyed the structure and two connecting buildings last July.

Building inspector Ben Boers said the permit was issued to the owner of the building.

City engineer Art Leynard says, however, that the demolition will not begin immediately. It will have to wait until something is done about the retaining wall at the rear of the building.

The concrete wall, which acts as a support for a section of Wallace St., above and behind the tire shop, was cracked by the intense heat of the mid-summer fire. Since then the crack has grown to a full-sized split in the wall. A section of the Wallace Street sidewalk above the split has been closed to pedestrian traffic and there is no parking allowed in the area.

It is felt that the concrete block frame of the tire shop is partially supporting the retaining wall and therefore, until the wall is repaired, the owners of the building have agreed to let it stand.

It is estimated that repairs to the wall will cost about $50,000.

75% Chance of '72 Vote—Bennett

Chant Not Running In Next Election

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislative Reporter

● Oak Bay man eyes Chant seat. Page 25

At a news conference, on Bennett's return from a two-week business and vacation trip, the premier named Public Works Minister W. N. Chant as the most likely cabinet dropout.

This possibility was confirmed some time later when Chant announced he wouldn't seek the Social Credit nomination again in the Victoria riding he has represented ever since 1953. He has held the works portfolio for 17 years.

Chant, who will be 77 years old in July and whose wife died recently, said he was in good health but felt it was time to step down so that "other capable people can fill the gap."

The premier said of Chant: "He's rendered great service and I would be happy if he would run again."

But Chant later told the Colonist he felt it was better to step down while he still felt fit enough to enjoy life. He declined to discuss his future plans but said he would remain in his present post until after the next election.

"It will be a break in my life," the minister said. "But I believe it was Solomon in the Book of Proverbs who says 'The end of the matter is better than the beginning'."

Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan and Highways Minister Wesley Black, two of the three remaining original members of Bennett's 1952 cabinet apart from the premier himself, are also rumored to be thinking of retirement. Bennett said, however, he believes both will run again in the next election.

Earlier this week Kiernan was questioned on this topic

Welfare Waiters Bar Way

VANCOUVER (CP) — Traffic on a downtown street was blocked by angry welfare recipients Thursday when a strike by civic workers prevented them from receiving their cheques. (See also Page 23.)

About 150 demonstrators laid down or sat in the street outside the welfare office, blocking a transit bus and several cars.

The situation threatened to turn ugly when motorists attempted to drive through the crowd. A few cars were rocked by demonstrators but the drivers withdrew when it became obvious the crowd would not move.

The welfare recipients ended their protest after four hours, when they were told another welfare office was open and would remain open until all cheques had been distributed.

The protesters were taken to the open office by one of the transit buses they had blocked.

Playdump

Few Election Hints In Turner's 'Budget'

He did it by telling the Commons he expects to bring a taxing-and-spending budget before the House Monday, May 8. He amplified that statement outside the House, saying:

"I don't expect there'll be an election before May 8."

The Turner statement was the closest thing to solid information opposition MPs have been able to pry from the Liberal front benches since speculation about an imminent election gripped the current Parliament about two months ago.

What Turner foresees and the decision of Prime Minister Trudeau, who is the only man who can decide when an election will be, could well be different. Turner was careful to say only that he "expects" to deliver his budget May 8. NDP Leader David Lewis said "it remains to be seen" whether this expectation will be realized.

Making his budget-date statement in a reply to Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West), Turner also apparently kept the door open on a budget presentation followed by a quick dissolution, perhaps before the six-day budget debate had run its full course.

Lambert asked a double-barrelled question — whether the government had given legislative priority both to bringing in a budget and holding reply covered only the first part of the question.

Saigon Repulses Quang Tri Flank

● How did those tanks get there? Page 3

Colonist - Los Angeles Times Service

SAIGON — A mixed force of South Vietnamese soldiers, marines, militia and cavalry troopers has repulsed a major communist effort to outflank the northernmost provincial capital of Quang Tri City, military headquarters reported today.

Though some fighting continued around the exposed capital just below the demilitarized zone, South Vietnamese headquarters was confident the tank-led enemy columns had been turned back. The South Vietnamese were issuing overlapping casualty reports indicating from 300 to 500 North Vietnamese killed and six to 10 tanks knocked out.

The battle in Quang Tri far overshadowed ground fighting elsewhere but it was a matter of degree. The communist offensive which began Good Friday entered its fifth week with critical threats being maintained against the highland provincial capital of Kon-

Peace Talks Probably Turn Secret

PARIS (AP) — The North Vietnamese said Thursday secret peace talks on the Vietnam war are probable. The statement was issued after both sides returned to the bargaining table for the first time in five weeks.

The session produced both charges and denials of a North Vietnamese invasion of the South, but both sides agreed to meet next Thursday.

Nguyen Minh Vy, North Vietnam's deputy chief delegate, said Politburo member Le Duc Tho will arrive from Hanoi within a week. He then added that secret talks are probable. Tho met privately in Paris last year with Henry Kissinger, President Nixon's national security adviser.

Brandt Saved By Two Votes

BONN (AP) — Chancellor Willy Brandt narrowly defeated an opposition attempt Thursday to oust him. The vote in parliament brought guarded sighs of relief to his supporters in East and West who had feared his policy of easing European tensions might fail.

But the crisis was not over. Opposition Christian Democrats mounted a fresh challenge to Brandt's coalition of Social Democrats and Free Democrats.

The opposition failed by two votes to unseat him through a no-confidence motion raised in the Bundestag, the lower house. The Christian Democrats won 247 votes but needed 249 of the 496 members.

Undaunted, they claimed the three abstentions meant Brandt did not have an absolute majority, and pushed quickly for a test vote on Brandt's budget.

Fighting back, the Free Democrats announced they

Floating Currency

Officers said the intruders dismantled the burglar alarm, cut telephone lines, entered the vault and cut a hole in the top of a small safe.

Then they carried water in buckets from the bank's basement and dumped it in the opening. Bundled currency floated to the top and were skimmed off, authorities said. Officials declined to say how much money was stolen.

Tory Leader Won't Pledge $150 Pension

VANCOUVER (CP) — Opposition leader Robert Stanfield Thursday scuttled pensioners' hopes that a Conservative government would implement a $150 old age pension.

Such a pension, he told members of the Pensioners for Action Now group, would mean a total annual expenditure of $1.5 billion, twice the amount now spent.

"I'm anxious to go as far as possible," the Conservative leader said. "But I have to keep in mind that this (expenditure) would result in a very substantial increase in taxes."

And the increased taxes, he said, would add considerably to already widespread unemployment.

As an alternative, Stanfield promised a Tory government would provide a "substantial increase" in pensions, and would ensure that pensions keep pace with changes in the cost of living. He would not elaborate on what a "substantial increase" might be.

Trudeau Backtracks

RCMP Again

OTTAWA (CP) — Removal of RCMP initials from buildings and patrol cars has been halted, said a statement issued Thursday night by the prime minister's office.

The statement said Prime Minister Trudeau had announced the decision at a meeting in Edson, Alta., "in response to many representations" sent to him and to Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer.

He referred to a public controversy centred in western Canada about a move — attributed to an RCMP decision in 1968 — to have the initials RCMP removed from patrol cars and buildings in favor of the word police atop the RCMP coat of arms.

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker was a leading opponent of the move, which peaked in parliamentary discussion some weeks ago.

The Trudeau statement released here said:

"The high stature enjoyed by the RCMP in Canada and throughout the world is a matter of pride to all Canadians. The government is determined not to permit any issue to detract from that prestige.

"The dislike of the new signs by Canadians — western Canadians in particular — has been communicated to us clearly. And we have listened."

B.C., Hydro Ignore Bus Bidder

VANCOUVER (CP) — A retired U.S. Air Force general said Wednesday he has offered the B.C. Hydro $1.1 million cash for its Lower Mainland transit system and claims he can make the debt-ridden operation pay.

Timothy James Manning, who has been in the transport business all his life, except for his military service, said his problem is that both Hydro and the provincial government appear to be ignoring his offer.

"They have barely even acknowledged it and they won't negotiate, which is most unusual," said the 63-year-old North Vancouver resident, who moved here from Seattle 14 years ago.

This is Mannings third offer to buy the ailing bus system. In 1958 he put in a $9 million bid for the bus system to the private B.C. Electric Co., forerunner of B.C. Hydro. It was rejected.

In 1962, after the government took over the power company, he made a second bid of $5.5 million. Again he was ignored.

Now he's down to $1.1 million and says he's still being rebuffed.

Manning said he has had solid financial backing for each of his offers, but does not want to name anyone.

He said people should not be taxed any longer to support an operation that is losing money.

The system costs about $17 million a year to operate and government figures put its annual losses at $2.3 million.

Earlier this month, the government offered the Greater Vancouver Regional District a base subsidy of $2.3 million, plus half of any operating deficit beyond that amount, to take over the system.

Manning did not give any details on how he would make the bus line pay.

Albert Head Cliffs Erode, Gravel Operations Blamed

By DON GAIN
Colonist Reporter

Two Albert Head waterfront properties are being eroded because of operations at the nearby provincial government gravel pit, according to owners of the properties.

Charlie Burr, 3615 Farhill, said Wednesday that in the last two years, he has lost an average of 10 feet off his Royal Roads beach cliff, and some sections of the cliff have crumbled to an even greater depth.

Mrs. Alex Webster, 3619 Farhill, in a separate interview, showed where she had planted broom on her property only to have it tumble down onto the beach.

Burr showed a fence he has had to move back three times in the past two years and the remains of a road to the beach which he had bulldozed three times in efforts to keep it open. The road, which he used last year, now is covered with earth, shrubs and trees which slid down the cliff.

Burr, who excavated a small lake on his property 12 years ago, said a provincial government geologist at the time had told him he would have no trouble if he did not dig below hardpan and penetrate into gravel underneath.

He had followed instruction, he said, but the provincial government's gravel pit operation had not been carried out with the same precautions.

The gravel pit fills up in the rainy season like a lake, he said, and the water then finds its way to the strait.

"It goes beneath our properties," Burr said, "and runs off on the beach at sea level." That is where the slides have started each time and the land above crumbles away, he added.

Mrs. Webster's husband, Alex, wrote to district engineer E. A. Lund of the highways department in February blaming the condition on the denuding of the gravel pit area of trees and topsoil and the "vast excavation gorged out of the hill."

Mrs. Webster at crumbling cliff

He wrote that his water rights licence was being interfered with (there are springs on his property) because during the summer the flow of water ceases entirely.

Copies of his letter were also sent to the Veterans Land Act regional director, Albert Head Ratepayers Association, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, area MLA Herb Bruch, and the environment and land use committee of the provincial government.

Webster subsequently had letters from Bruch saying that the highways department was checking into the matter.

Eric Smith, technician with the department told the Colonist he had been out to see the Websters' property but he wanted to talk to Webster before making a statement on it.

Both Webster and Burr claimed that the operation of the gravel pit was in contravention to the zoning regulations established for the area a few years before it went into operation but Smith said he did not believe this was so.

Smith also said he was not sure the situation was one that should be handled by the highways department. It might be a metter for the attention of the water rights department, he said.

Burr told the Colonist he would like to see "an independent audit of the provincial government's planning, finances and anything to do with the livelihood and health of the people and a jurisdictional inquiry by the Supreme Court of Canada into all governmental functions." He said it would be "the only way to get onto solid ground."

He said, and Mrs. Webster agreed with him, that "98 per cent of public opinion out here doesn't mean a thing. We want an overall plan for this area and there just isn't one."
